HEAT BREAKS - Many Deaths Blamed On Weather; Ohio Hit

DEATH TOLL HIGH IN COUNTRY'S BIG CITIES

Promised Rains Fail To Materialize—Many Drown

NEW YORK, July 14.—Ten persons are dead and scores are prostrated in the metropolitan district today as the result of the severe heat wave which has struck the eastern section of the country this year.

Seven of the deaths reported were in New York City proper, and one each in Newark, Jersey City and Camden, N. J. In New York, the mercury reached a high level of 91.

PITTSBURGH, July 14.—A break in the heat wave was promised western Pennsylvania today by the U. S. Weather Bureau here, after the torrid spell had taken a toll of one dead by drowning and two overcome by heat.

Paul Houser, 12, drowned at Meadville, Pa., in French Creek. Joseph Morits, Homestead, and George Lesko, Pittsburgh, were taken to hospitals when they were overcome by intense heat.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 14.—With six deaths and scores of prostrations directly attributed to the record breaking heat wave which has held Pennsylvania in its grip for the past two days, the weatherman, who yesterday had promised relief in some sections of the state today was less hopeful.

PHILADELPHIA, July 14.—Two men died yesterday in Philadelphia when the thermometer registered 93 degrees for a new high mark of the year. One heat prostration was reported.

Bucks County reported one death when a farmer was overcome while storing his hay crop.

Another heat death occurred in West Chester.

Five persons were overcome at Wilmington, Del., when the temperature reached 95 degrees.

Camden, N. J., reported one heat death.

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Ohio today was recovering from its second heat wave of the year which yesterday mounted to 97 and averaged above 90 over the state.

Sandusky on Lake Erie reported a temperature of 97; Youngstown reported 96. Promised rains did not materialize, though brisk breezes offered relief from the torrid wave.

A cement worker, Alfred Chapin, 56, was overcome late Wednesday while at work, and died.

Hermon Frontiste, 15, drowned while bathing in a creek near here.

CHICAGO, July 14.—With eight persons dead in the wake of a two-day heat wave, cool breezes from the lake today sent the thermometer cascading from a high mark of 91 degrees.

Three were drowned in Lake Michigan seeking relief from the torrid wave.

BOSTON, July 9.—Three deaths were reported in New England today as a result of the record heat wave.

PALESTINE QUAKE DAMAGE $1,500,000

JERUSALEM, Palestine, July 14.—Rending 1,000 persons homeless and bringing death to several hundred others, Monday's earthquake wrought damages estimated at more than $1,500,000 in Palestine and trans-Jordania, latest available estimates showed today.

A check-up showed that the casualties in Palestine proper will not exceed 150, although many hundreds were injured. In Nabulus, the deaths have been fixed at sixty, and as reports continued to come in from outlying towns in the affected area of trans-Jordania, indications were that the death list would approximate 400.

The Hebrew university in Jerusalem was among the greatest sufferers, the destruction of laboratories and the resulting interruption of work causing a loss of $50,000.

MAYORS TO RACE TO PLEASE GOVERNORS

LANSING, Mich., July 14.—An airplane race between Mayor John W. Smith, of Detroit, and Mayor William B. Thompson, of Chicago, was announced today as one of the features of the conference of governors at Mackinac Island, beginning July 25.

Mayor Smith with Paul Strausburg as pilot and Mayor Thompson with M. M. Meigs, a Chicago publisher as pilot, will start from Detroit and Chicago an hour apart July 24 allowing the Chicago mayor an hour's lead to compensate for the difference in distance.

PAYROLL HIGHER

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 14.—Despite low steel operations, payroll figures for first half of 1927 are higher than the same period of 1926. Figures for first half 1927 were $42,643,977 against $41,840,092 last year. June figures were $7,661,610 against $7,134,372 last year.

FANATICS BURN TO DEATH IN CHURCH

BERLIN, July 14.—Fourteen religious fanatics locked themselves in the Orthodox Church in Kustanaj, Siberia, set fire to the building and burned to death, according to dispatches from Omsk.

The fanatics left a manifesto declaring they had sacrificed themselves to save their country from the Bolsheviks.

BYRD BASKS IN SUN ABOARD LEVIATHAN

ABOARD U. S. S. LEVIATHAN, July 14.—In a secluded corner on the sun deck of this vessel, Commander Richard E. Byrd continued today to take full advantage of his ocean trip.

The transatlantic aviator, who is returning home with his companions, George Noville, Bert Acosta and Bert Balchen, is not in seclusion, but is glad of the opportunity to free himself from social duties.

FALL PROVES FATAL

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Mrs. Martha Rankin, 70, Westerville, O., died in a hospital here today from injuries suffered Saturday night when she fell from an auto near Westerville.

WILBERFORCE UNDER FIRE

CHARGES OF FIRING TEN EMPLOYEES WILL REACH STATE BOARD

Intensive Probe May Follow—Charge Retaliation Program

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Announcement was made today that, at a session starting at 10 a. m. next Wednesday, the state board of control will pass upon the question of approving the payroll for the state supported Combined Normal and Industrial School at Wilberforce University near Xenia.

Action on the payroll was deferred pending consideration by the board of plans for improving the work of the school.

Charges that ten officials of the state-supported Combined Normal and Industrial Department of Wilberforce University including professors and other employees of long standing, were discharged by the school's separate board of nine trustees without being offered an explanation, will be aired at a hearing before the state board of control in Columbus sometime next week.

This announcement is made by State Representative R. D. Williamson.

Dismissal of the ten university men is alleged to have been the result of a "house cleaning" conducted by university heads in retaliation for testimony the men are said to have given at a recent inquiry conducted by State Examiner Brown, of the state auditor's office, into alleged irregularities in the administration of state funds.

It is charged that all university employees had been warned that they would lose their positions should they testify at the examiner's inquiry.

The ten officials are said to have not been advised of their dismissal until June 11. Two were later reinstated.

Four of the eight discharged men who will be accorded an opportunity to explain their position at the hearing next week, according to Representative Hughes, are William T. Hughes, professor of instruction in the commercial division since 1921; Professor Dennis; J. D. Newsome, chief engineer for sixteen years, and Theodore Clayton Carter, executive secretary to Superintendent R. C. Bundy, whose position was abolished.

Representative Williamson forecasts an intensive investigation of the administration of the normal school.

PLANS NEW FLIGHT

PARIS, July 14.—Captain Diodonne Coste, former holder of the endurance record for airplanes, announced today his intention of making a non-stop flight to New York within the next week or ten days.

HOME OF JUDGE WHO SENTENCED THREE MURDERERS IS FORCIBLY ENTERED

JOLIET, Ill., July 14.—Three men broke into the home here today of Judge Frederick A. Hill, who imposed sentence upon the three desperate convicted murderers sentenced to hang tomorrow for the murder of Deputy Warden Peter M. Klein.

The men, believed by authorities to have been prompted in their raid by Walter Stalesky, Charles Duchowski, and Robert Torrez, who have been ordered to the gallops, were routed by the jurist's son, John Hill.

That Robert Torrez may escape sentence tomorrow was seen as a possibility in the actions of J. X. Mondragon, Mexican consul of Chicago, who asked that Judge Hill rule upon a petition of insanity.

INFANT SUFFOCATED

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Funeral arrangements were being made here today for June Goodykintz, 2, who was suffocated last night when she fell in an outdoor vault.

FIRE CHIEF MAKES INSPECTION HERE

Fire Chief William Hanifan is enlisting the co-operation of citizens during his semi-annual building inspection of business houses of the city for possible fire hazards next week.

Property owners are requested to clean up buildings. Chief Hanifan has already made an inspection of local factories this month.

The year 1927 has been designated as Fire Prevention Year by the National Association of Fire Chiefs with the aim of reducing the annual property loss by fire.

The Xenia Fire Department conducts a building inspection of the city twice each year and makes a report to state headquarters.

WAGES THE SAME

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 14.—Wages of sheet and tin workers will remain unchanged during July-August period as result of bi-monthly examination of sales prices held recently. The average price of black sheets was found to have been $3 a hundred pounds, unchanged from previous examination period.

WATCHDOG

Selected by the two Nicaraguan factions as mediator, Brigadier General Frank R. McCoy has been appointed the official United States observer in the presidential elections which will be held in the troubled South American republic next year.

PASTOR WITHDRAWS CHARGES AND SAILS FOR EUROPEAN TRIP

Recants Testimony Against Federal Official

WASHINGTON, July 14.—The Rev. Dr. Jason Noble Pierce, pastor of President Coolidge's church here, who gave the capital a nine-day sensation recently by endeavoring to have Howard T. Cole, a government engineer, "fired" from the U. S. Shipping Board on charges involving moral turpitude, has withdrawn his charges and sailed for Europe on a vacation, it was learned today. Cole had brought suit against the pastor for $50,000.

The case had its origin in a letter which Dr. Pierce wrote to Gen. A. C. Dalton, president of the emergency fleet, demanding Cole's dismissal and his "banishment" from Washington. The pastor accused Cole of having had intimate relations with one of his parishioners, a widow, who had "confessed" to the pastor. Cole denied the charges and countered with the suit, declaring he would make Dr. Pierce prove his allegations, or pay $50,000 for damaging his reputation. Cole is unmarried.

Just before sailing for Europe, Dr. Pierce sent Gen. Dalton, another letter, saying "It is requested that you consider as withdrawn charges preferred against Howard T. Cole, an engineer in the employ of the U. S. Shipping Board and Emergency Fleet Corporation in my communications of April 2 and May 10, 1927."

YOUNG TEACHER AND FLYER RESUME TRIP

CHICAGO, July 14.—Miss Mildred A. Doran, school teacher, of Flint, Mich., hopped off from Checkerboard Field here today on the second leg of her proposed flight from California to Hawaii.

The plane, piloted by Augie Pedlar, rose into the air without a mishap. The destination was Tulsa, Okla. William F. Malloska, wealthy Flint business man, who is backing the trans-Pacific hop, was a third passenger.

Miss Doran plans to arrive in Long Beach, Cal., after short flights and contemplates hopping off for Honolulu August 11.

The plane is a special type with a single Wright whirlwind motor, similar to the one used by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. It is capable of a sustained flight of more than fifty hours, according to designers.

HAWAIIAN FLYERS COMING TO CHICAGO

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14.—Lieuts. Lester Maitland and Albert Hegenberger, the first men to fly to Hawaii, will leave for Chicago and Milwaukee tonight or tomorrow.

The aviators were guests of honor at a Shriners' luncheon today.

The trip to Chicago will be made by train. After a short stop in Milwaukee, Maitland's home town, the flyers will report to Trubee Davidson, assistant secretary of war for aviation, in Washington.

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Chiefs of the banks of England, France and Germany, who conferred with Governor Cressinger of the Federal Reserve board in Washington this week, are financiers by occupation today, but none of them has long been a professional banker.

Montagu C. Norman, governor of the Bank of England, was a professional soldier not so many years ago, having been an officer in the celebrated Bedfordshire regiment. With that command he fought gallantly in the South African war and emerged with a D. C. O. Norman has been boss of the "Old Lady of Threadneedle Street" only since 1920. Like so many Englishmen of big business, Governor Norman is university bred, being an Eton boy and a Cambridge man. He is a member

MUSIC AND LECTURE OPENING
FEATURES OF CHAUTAUQUA HERE

The Filipino Collegians and Arthur Wainwright Evans, the distinguished Welsh orator, headline the attractions on the opening day of Xenia's Redpath Chautauqua in Shawnee Park Thursday afternoon and night.

With a great variety of native instruments and with appropriate stage settings, the interesting group from the Philippines entertained Thursday afternoon with a popular concert.

The Collegians will also be on the program with special scenic and lighting effects at Thursday night's performance, preceding the address by the Welsh orator on "What America Means to Me."

Mr. Evans is not unknown to Xenia audiences, having been heard a few months ago on the Central High School Lyceum course program.

During his twenty-four years in Great Britain, he was privileged to meet the great men of the day and took full advantage of the opportunity to study social and political conditions at first hand.

The Chautauqua season in the afternoon began at 3 o'clock and the evening program will start at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Louise McIntyre, author of the book "How's Your Health?" and founder of the McIntyre Health System, will deliver a health lecture at 10:30 o'clock Friday morning on Chautauqua's second day on the subject, "Keeping Fit." With a delightful humor and practical suggestions, Mrs. McIntyre will emphasize the importance of good health.

Mrs. McIntyre will also speak in the afternoon on "How's Your Health?"

The re-making of a selfish man is the theme of the play, "A Message from Mars," to be produced Friday night. The central figure is Horace Parker. He is rich in material wealth, but a pauper in the spirit of sympathy and charity for his fellowmen. He tries to escape the armored messenger from Mars who appears in a dream, but the visitor clutches him with a powerful hand and leads him through never-to-be-forgotten experiences.

Chautauqua will present another headline lecturer next Tuesday night, July 19, in Ralph Parlette, humorous philosopher, just returned from a world tour.

Chautauqua feels fortunate that Parlette is willing to devote a few weeks to its platform. Returning May 25 from a world tour, he hurried to his headquarters in Chicago, delivered the name of a new book to his publisher, and reported for his speaking tour. His humorous talk will be regarded as one of the high spots of the week's program.

PHONE PIONEERS TO ATTEND OUTING

Reminiscences of "the good old days" will mingle with discussions of future progress in the telephone industry when members of N. C. Kingsbury Chapter No. 2, Telephone Pioneers of America, assemble at Cedar Point July 15 and 16 for their general meeting.

The Kingsbury chapter of the organization is composed of men and women from all parts of Ohio who have spent twenty-one years or more in the telephone business. Included in the membership of that 500 are several who have been actively engaged in telephone work since it first obtained a foothold in Ohio, nearly fifty years ago.

The total attendance at the gathering will be between 500 and 600, including the families of many of the Pioneers.

Graveyard for Pets

Mayor F. W. Donnelly of Trenton, who has provided a pet cemetery, as a memorial to canary which cheered his moments of depression.

By MARION M'ROBERT

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927

TRENTON, N. J., July 1.—Because a gay little canary with its nightly song and frolic made life happier for the hardest worked man in this busy town, boys and girls of Trenton are to have a beautiful cemetery in which to inter their pets when the latter have passed on to whatever reward comes to dog, cat and bird pals who fulfill their mission in life.

The pet cemetery is the gift of Mayor F. W. Donnelly, for twenty years mayor of Trenton. It comprises several acres of woodland and meadow, owned by the city. Officials say the ground will not be needed in the city's plans for growth for generations to come and so it is to be turned over to the S. P. C. A. to be made into a burial ground in memory of the bird that was the mayor's constant companion for several years.

In the rearing of his own husky boy and girls the mayor has had many loved pets in his family. There was Mike, an Irish terrier, who knew every corner of the city and made friends with everybody. Mike was the most democratic of dogs and would have made a wonderful campaigner if his services had ever been needed in that direction. There were other dogs, too, not quite so well known to the public, and any number of cats and their progeny. None were nearer to the heart of their master however than the little bird.

Feathered Sympathizer.

It seemed to save its sweetest song for him and no matter what hour of the day or night he came home the bird would flutter about its cage until he took it out for play. Then, perched on his finger, it voiced its happiness at his home coming. Through the dark two years that threatened him with invalidism the remainder of his life its song cheered him, and when politics and city affairs grew oppressive with their intricacies he had at least one bright hour to look forward to, he declared.

And then came the day when the little bird could sing no more and the next day the master carefully placed it in a small box and buried it in a wee grave in his yard. Ever since that time Mayor Donnelly says the sight of the tiny grave brings a lump in his throat.

In his talks with children they have often told him about pets that have died and they have expressed the wish that the dog or cat could have been buried somewhere where they might visit the grave "and show that we still remember and love." So the mayor looked about him and after discussing the idea with city officials it was agreed that the vacant plot of ground be placed at the disposal of pet lovers. The S. P. C. A. will improve the place and help to keep it a beauty spot.

PRIVATE IN GUARD
COMPANY MAY FACE
MILITARY CHARGES

Because of a technical error in the warrant upon which he was arrested in Dayton and returned to Xenia Tuesday on a charge of publicly refusing to attend the summer training camp, Private Joseph Somerville, of Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, was released from the County Jail Wednesday by Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy on a writ of habeas corpus, filed by Attorney F. L. Johnson.

Somerville was immediately re-arrested upon leaving the Court House by Captain Ozz Cornwell, commanding officer of the guard unit, and placed under guard at the company's armory on E. Main St., pending court martial proceedings.

It was announced that the warrant did not contain the specific charge to be placed against the private at the court martial—that of "verbally abusing" the commanding officer of the company.

The warrant was issued by the company's summary court officer to the Montgomery County sheriff. Somerville was arrested in Dayton, returned to Xenia and was lodged in jail from Tuesday noon to Wednesday noon.

Since Company L does not leave for its fifteen-day summer training period at Camp Perry, O., until Saturday, July 16, Judge Gowdy ruled that the private's mere detention of refusal to attend the camp does not constitute an offense because the guard unit has not already departed.

Somerville came to Xenia in April and accepted employment as cook at the O. S. and S. O. Home, joining Company L soon afterward. Recently he has been working in Dayton as a painter. His home is in Alabama.

PRIMARY LAW DOES
NOT COVER SCHOOL
BOARD CANDIDATES

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Ohio's primary laws do not apply to nomination of candidates for member of a school board, Attorney General Turner held, in an opinion given Secretary of State Brown. Such candidates must be mentioned by petition, Turner ruled.

Ohio laws decree that nominations of candidates for the office of member of a board of education shall be made by nominating papers duly signed by not less than twenty-five electors of the school district, or either sex, for each candidate to be nominated in village districts, and in city school districts by not less than two per cent of the electors voting at the next preceding general school election in such city school district according to Turner.

Nominations of candidates for the office of member of a county board of education, Turner ruled, shall be made by petition signed by petitioners who shall be qualified electors residing in the county school district, not less in number than one per cent of the electors voting at the last preceding election for members of local boards of education in the districts within the county school district and not less than twenty-five in any case.

Candidates for member of the board of education in rural school districts must be nominated by nominating papers duly signed by not less than twenty-five qualified electors of said rural school district for each candidate to be nominated in the district, Turner held.

SHELVING ADDED TO COUNTY LIBRARY

The new shelving ordered for the main section of the Greene County District Library is now installed and in use. This additional shelf space provided room, not only for bound issues of magazines but for the unbound volumes, as well. Miss Mildred W. Sandoe, district librarian, points out.

The reference books also have been housed in the large front reading room, leaving the small back room for a non-fiction room. This made more room in the stacks and it is now possible to add new books and to find room for them in their right places on the shelves, Miss Sandoe says.

The Theatre

By FLEET SMITH

NEW YORK, July 14.—The "Great White Way" is now "The Great White Movie Way." And the movie signs have made it so. From Forty-second Street at Times Square all the way up to Columbus Circle at Fifty-ninth St., Broadway is virtually one huge electric light, sending thousands upon thousands of watts of electricity into the heavens and along the avenue; a gorgeous electric rainbow, with millions of bulbs gleaming and glittering and actual scenes pictured in electric lights and in relief.

Ever since Paramount started to blaze New York with its tremendous sign on "The Covered Wagon" back in 1923, the movie houses along Broadway have outvied each other in searching for the most striking and brightest electrical effects. "The Covered Wagon," depicted in its huge sign, the trek of the horse and oxen teams across the desert, the whole effect lighted beyond description. Then came the "Ten Commandments," when the exterior and interior of the George M. Cohan was done in blue, to the amazement of passersby and theater-goers. "The King of Kings" sign which decorates at the Gaiety Theatre now, is generally reported to have cost in the neighborhood of $35,000 and "The Big Parade," with its enormous letters in electricity is said to have cost $17,000.

Which reminds me of the story

Paramount is now working on a startling electric sign to decorate the Criterion Theatre at 44th St., for "Wings," which opens there on August 1. I am told that the sign, which will undoubtedly cost several thousand dollars, is going to depict, in relief, a tremendous battle in the air, with airplanes flying, falling in flames to the earth; and the whole accompanied by real propellers whirling and of the road show manager who went out into the "Sticks" with a show called "Zaza" a few years ago. The show was in a small Ohio town and during the middle of the week the manager of the local theater asked him for $4,000 expense money to pay for the electric sign "Zaza" in front of the theater. He protested $4000 was away too much for a one word sign burning but a week. "I know," said the local manager, "but this $4000 is to pay for the sign we had up for the show last week." "What in the world played here that carried such a title as to eat up $4000 worth of electricity in a week?" asked the roadshow manager. "Sir Johnson Forbes Robertson in 'The Passing of the Third Floor Back,' he was told.

He Drove Lincoln

During the historic Lincoln-Douglas tour in the famous presidential campaign of 1859, W. N. Wiley, of The Dallas, Ore., now 88 years old, drove the wagon in which both candidates traveled the country, holding joint debates in each town they reached.

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927. THE DALLAS, Ore., July 14.—Historians and biographers made a great discovery here the other day. A party of visitors, including several prominent writers on historical subjects, found W. N. Wiley, one of the best-known characters in The Dallas, who was the driver of the Lincoln-Douglas wagon.

That "Old Bill" Wiley was the Lincoln-Douglas wagon driver means nothing at all to the younger generation, but the oldsters remember, without the slightest difficulty, the famous Lincoln-Douglas campaign, one of the most remarkable political forays in the history of the country, and the fact that the man is still alive who drove the contesting candidates throughout their tour is of keen interest to Americans who remember the hectic days of the Lincoln campaign.

There were no private trains for political candidates then. Abraham Lincoln and Stephen Douglas, bitter political opponents and rivals for the presidential office, were compelled to move slowly from town to town, seated in a covered wagon behind a sturdy team of horses. Wiley was the driver.

Naturally the venerable teamster became closely acquainted with both men, and he greatly enjoys reciting his reminiscences of the historic tour whenever he can find an audience.

It was the custom of both men, Wiley says, to offer lifts to foot-weary travelers whom they passed along the road. Placing their newly-discovered companion between them, they would then seek to draw him out on the political situation, without revealing their identity. Thus they obtained an insight into public opinion as reflected by the acquaintances they made. Often the debates inside the wagon would rival in energy the public contests which the two candidates staged at every stopping place.

Wiley is now 88 years old. For so aged a citizen he is hale and hearty, works every day around his small farm, and devotes the evenings chiefly to talks with friends of travelers on the tremendous advantages enjoyed in the good old days.

John Weir Cooper, Margaret Ione Cooper and Margaret Ballentine are plaintiffs in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court against Frances and Bernard Klein, charging the defendants are illegally possessing a farm of 118.99 acres owned by the plaintiffs in Xenia Twp.

Plaintiffs complain they have had possession of the farm in question now occupied by the defendants ever since they purchased it and their predecessors in the title owned and occupied the premises for more than twenty-one years.

Petition charges the defendants began cutting hay, have torn down fences, that they are about to remove the hay already cut and are attempting to appropriate a certain strip of land on the west side of the farm.

It is claimed the defendants have no right to the land or to dispute the strip of ground on the west side, but that they nevertheless, refuse to vacate the farm.

Plaintiffs were granted a temporary restraining order by the court, enjoining the defendants from removing property from the farm. Such damages as the court may determine they are entitled to under the circumstances are also sought in the petition. Miller and Finney are attorneys for the plaintiffs.

TRANSFER ORDERED

Probate Court has approved an application of Beatrice Losey, formerly Beatrice Trubee, for an order of the court directing that certain funds invested by Walter J. Chambliss, as administrator of the estate of B. F. Chambliss, deceased, be turned over to her as the person entitled to them. The court decided she is entitled to the sum in question, $57.34 invested in running stock in the Peoples Building and Savings Co. in the name of J. Carl Marshall, as probate judge, and ordered this amount transferred to her.

APPOINT ADMINISTRATORS

J. A. Finney has been appointed administrator of the estate of J. A. Baker, late of Jamestown, in Probate Court, and has filed bond of $1,000. Frank Shigley, D. E. Bailey and J. Harve Sanders were named appraisers.

John Allen has been named administrator of the estate of John Hardy Manley, late of Xenia, with $1,500 bond.

ONE THERMOMETER

SHOWS 100 DEGREES

The weather forecaster was partially vindicated Thursday in his guess that cooler temperatures and thundershowers would break the monotonous hot spell of recent days.

It rained sufficiently long Thursday noon to dampen the streets but the shower was of short duration and Xenians resigned themselves to a continuation of torrid heat.

Street level heat was near the boiling point Wednesday and the hot rays of the sun chased the ever fluctuating mercury to a new peak for the summer. Thermometers indicated as high as ninety-five degrees and one did even better, or worse, and registered an even 100. Citizens believed readily enough this thermometer was the more accurate.

"Cloudy" is the rather hopeful outlook for Friday.

ATTORNEY GENERAL

CLARIFIES LAWS IN

OPINIONS ISSUED

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Attorney General Edward C. Turner has issued a ruling that it is the duty of the board of county commissioners to pay the burial expenses of persons who are "charged upon the county," and that the board must pay the burial expenses of an indigent person who dies in a district tuberculosis hospital, after being committed to the hospital by proper county officials, even though such a person had been supported, in whole, or in part, by a city. This ruling went to officials of the state bureau of inspection of public officers.

An owner of livestock injured, or killed, by a dog belonging to such owner is not entitled to receive compensation from the county funds for the injury to such livestock, Turner held in an opinion given to Prosecuting Attorney W. M. McKenzie, Chillicothe.

"Where the owner of livestock injured or killed, by a dog not belonging to such owner, presents a claim to the township trustees, who hear such claim, make an allowance thereof, and transmit their findings to the board of county commissioners," Turner continued, "the county commissioners alone may decide whether such claim shall be allowed, in whole, or in part, but the commissioners' action is subject to review by the probate court on appeal."

County commissioners are not authorized, under Ohio law, to purchase, with county funds, burglary or hold-up insurance, or insurance against forgery, for the protection of the county treasurer, the attorney general held, in another ruling to the state bureau of inspection of public officers.

COMPETITION BRINGS PERFECTION

Long ago someone said: "Competition is the life of trade."

It was a smart remark, quoted down through the years.

We might change it about, and say: Competition is the trade of life.

There is so much talk about brotherhood and co-operation and service that we are in danger of forgetting that without individual effort, all these are but meaningless words.

Every man's job is to do the thing he has to do better than anyone else can do it.

The fine old poet, Edwin Markham, once said:

"We have committed the Golden Rule to memory; let us now commit it to life. We have preached brotherhood for centuries; we now need to find a material basis for brotherhood."

The material basis for brotherhood is the perfection of each by individual effort.

Our work is, first, to do well, and second to co-operate.

Competition is, indeed, the trade of life.

There is a great deal of bunk written about co-operation.

Of what use is co-operation if there is no personal perfection, or at least the striving for personal perfection?

It is healthy to try and outdo the other man, so long as the spirit is friendly and not hateful.

Competition has produced the best examples of public service in the world. Competition has produced the best type of private service.

Competition has produced the best man.

Competition is the trade of life.

The Way of the World

RACING LIGHT BEAMS

Prof. Michelson, world-famous scientist of Chicago university, makes fascinating experiments to find the exact speed of light. Rays of light are raced between revolving mirrors on mountain tops or shot through pipe lines. The knowledge of the universe is thus increased. Fortunate for us, there are a few people more interested in racing light beams than in racing horses.

THEY USED THEIR HEADS

Between 150 and 200 millions of dollars were saved in the last five years in a large American city because of the use of arbitration in the building trades. Strikes have been prevented, work has gone on, the public has been protected.

Men can do wonders when they use their heads instead of their fighting muscles.

MEN WANT INSPIRATION

Roger Babson, nationally-known economist, has been telling preachers some things. He asks pastors to try competing with experts in other lines. Men and woman go to church to worship, to get courage, wisdom, and above all, inspiration. Few of them want lectures or entertainment. There is better entertainment to be had outside the church—but the church can be made to give something that no entertainment can furnish.

LAW COVERS EVERYTHING

A comet 12 times as large as the earth has been rushing toward us at the rate of a million miles a day. If it struck the earth, imagine what its meteoric fragments and its deadly gases would do! But it has begun to veer away. Soon it will be out of sight. It's a universe of order. Even comets stick to their paths. Law is supreme.

THRILLS ARE GOING OUT

A flight from New York to Rome is announced for October. We can never quite revive the Lindbergh thrill. There is something sad about a world that is growing so nearly thrill-proof. Perhaps we can count on enough ingenuity to furnish at least one thrill a year.

It isn't ingenuity that is running out. It seems to be our capacity for being hard-boiled that's growing.

MAKE IT A GOOD NAME

Every little while somebody bobs up in court and asks to have his name changed. He doesn't like the sound of it or somebody laughs at it or something else is the matter with it. There are few if any good reasons for changing one's name. Better take the name you have and make a good name out of it. Make it stand for something big—as it is. That's a triumph.

THEY'LL FIND A WAY

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is right when he says college fees ought to be increased and more students ought to pay their way. In the old days few went to college, and the larger number of those who did were preparing to preach or teach, and never could expect to earn much.

An increasing number of so-called students now go to college for a good time—for social reasons. Thousands of that sort are little benefited by college years. They should pay their way. And if the fees were increased the worth-while ones would find a way to pay.

SONGS of a HOUSEWIFE

OFFS by Marjorie K. Rawlins

I KNOW the sort of folks—the way they live and dress and dine, the way they work and laugh and play. On shabby streets like mine.

I know why houses lack for paint, and living rooms are bare, why colors and designs grow faint in carpets on the stair.

I know how many feet are shod, the small mouths to be fed; the weary ways that must be trod for daily board and bed.

I know how much of self they give; how beautiful, how fine, the rich lives, brimming full, folks live on shabby streets like mine.

What Says The Guinee Book, Henry?

KELLYGRAMS by FRED C KELLY

WORK HARDEST WHERE EASIEST

I was in the office of the sales manager for a successful automobile company recently when he was in the midst of re-organizing his next campaign.

"We're going to put more salesmen where business has been good and take them away from those places where it hasn't been so good," he told me.

That sounded contrary to certain maxims I recalled from my school copybooks and from lives of great men. Haven't we always been told that one should invariably tackle the hard job rather than the easy one?

"It does sound more righteous to work hardest where the results have been poorest," admitted the sales manager. "The only trouble is that such a plan doesn't always work. In certain sections of the country we haven't been selling many cars because business is slow, or weather conditions are unfavorable. No matter how hard we might work there, results would still be unsatisfactory. On the other hand, we found that in many sections, our cars have been selling without much effort—simply because people there are exceptionally prosperous. Common sense directs us, therefore, to work hardest in those places where the outlook is most promising."

Come to think of it, that is the same plan that the more intelligent political managers follow. They don't send all their most plausible speakers into territory hopelessly in the hands of the opposition, but into doubtful states or in states where they have better than an even chance for victory.

Maybe the Puritanical notion that we should work hardest or longest at the hardest job isn't always wise. Don't devote your life trying to promote a livery stable in Venice. Sell your wares or your talents where they should be most in demand. Go where the going is good.

Answers to Correspondents

IF YOU LIKE HARD, CRUNCHY BREADS

Bread of some sort is a universal food and is universally liked for it has no decided flavor of its own so can be taken with other foods without modifying their flavor. It is well liked also for it is "filling" and gives a comfortable sense of satiety.

Being mostly starch, bread is largely a heat and energy (power) food. Taken in excess, it will cause an acid stomach and general acidosis and overweight. In moderation it is one of our best energy foods. I am often asked about bread—especially asked if one type is less fattening than another type. And I'll answer that now: All breads and all other foods are "fattening" in proportion to the number of calories they contain.

Ordinary breads contain over one-third of their weight in water (which doesn't count in calories), and they run 75 C. to the ounce; so the thoroughbred breads, such as the Swedish Health Bread, run 75 C. to the ounce, for there is practically no water in them. They average probably 100 C. to the ounce. (One of the whole plate-sized cakes that I weighed registered four ounces, thus making it approximately 400 C. However, most of the bran in it eliminates most of the bran in it, and perhaps they won't register any more than the ordinary bread.) These breads are very wholesome breads, if they are thoroughly masticated for they are usually made of whole grain flours, including the bran, so are good for constipation, and they certainly are good for the teeth.

TOASTED BREADS

Toasted breads have the same caloric value as they have before toasting. The toasting, while it dehydrates (the first step in starch digestion) and so makes the starch more easily digested, doesn't impair its caloric value in the least; therefore it, too, is just as fattening as the plain breads. You won't ever say again: "I don't eat bread—only toast," will you?

GLUTEN BREADS

Gluten bread has a higher percentage of the protein of the wheat. Protein can also be made into fat, and it will be made into fat, if it is more than the body needs for repair. Gluten bread might be advisable if no flesh foods are eaten, because of this higher percentage of protein, and it is often advised to diabetics because of the fact that it has a lessened content of carbohydrates.

WHOLE GRAIN BREAD

I recently had a little clipping sent me which stated that the whole grain bread had should be discouraged; that it is not necessary for health to have the whole grains. What do I think?

I think, and so do the majority of those who have studied the question, that whole grain breads ARE superior to the refined flour breads because in the refining of flour the germ and the outer layers are taken away, and this takes away the best part of the protein and the most of the vitamins and probably half of the mineral salts. If only white bread is used, then much more of the foods containing the mineral elements and vitamins would have to be taken, and this may mean too high a diet.

White bread, especially white bread made with milk, however, is perfectly safe to eat; there's nothing poisonous about it, as some of the faddists teach. But if it is taken exclusively, it should be limited for the reason I have given above. It is certainly safer for children, especially, to have the whole grain breads for the daily diet.

However, the fact that more of the better-grade protein and more of the vitamins and mineral elements are included in the whole grains, does not mean that it is a perfect food by itself. No grain protein is complete; that is, it does not contain all the building elements; nor would there be a sufficient amount of the vitamins and mineral elements in any grain for a complete diet. In fact, there is no one food-stuff that is complete. Milk comes the nearest.

All the grains rank about the same as far as the vital elements are concerned. Oatmeal has a little higher content of protein and fat, and corn has a little higher content of fat than the other grains. (For this reason corn bread is a little more fattening, weight for weight, than other breads.)

Those who are overweight invariably eat too much bread. AND HOW!

How to Achieve Beauty

MME. HELENA RUBENSTEIN

GENERAL RULES FOR NORMAL AND DRY HAIR

To keep normal hair normal, especially if it is bobbed, I advocate washing it every week or ten days with an herbal shampoo. If there is any tendency toward dryness after the shampoo this may be overcome by rubbing in a good scalp food. At least twice a week when brushing the hair apply a little tonic to the roots. This will refresh and invigorate the scalp and hair.

If you possess hair and scalp that are unusually dry, this may be the result of a nervous condition of the system or of careless shampooing which have produced a sluggishness of the oil glands of the scalp. This dry condition often causes the scalp to become "tight" and the hair brittle and straw-like, breaking and splitting easily.

This extremely dry condition gives a parched badly-groomed appearance to the hair. To overcome it wash the hair every ten days or two weeks with an herbal shampoo that has been especially compounded for a dry condition. Frequently precede the regular shampoo with a hot balsam oil treatment. This will feed the scalp and make up for the deficiency in oil which it lacks naturally.

After the herbal shampoo, rub the scalp food in well. It should not make the hair oily or hinder curling in any way.

An application of hair tonic at least three times a week is of importance if your scalp is dry. Apply the tonic before brushing so that the natural oils brought out by the brushing and the tonic itself may be carried through the hair follicles.

And now we come to the home treatment for the oily hair. This most distressing and prevalent condition of the scalp and hair is caused by relaxed glands which allow an excessive excretion of oil.

If you suffer from an extremely oily condition, wash the hair at least once a week, and if necessary more often. Every two weeks, or whenever the hair looks dull and lifeless, use an application of hot balsam oil preceding your regular shampoo. Frequent brushing is splendid for an oily condition. At first you may notice an increase in the oily condition, but eventually it will help materially in correcting it.

"I have observed that the possession of large sums of money by an inexperienced young man is likely to bring ruin."—Edward Hillman, Chicago department store founder.

"The college graduate as a rule, is not content to take up the routine, manual work of the railroad business and they seldom consider employment in a department where they actually can learn the business. Usually they want to work in the legal, engineering or the higher mechanical departments. On the other hand, the man who starts in the yards and works up in the transportation department is the man who eventually becomes the executive while the college man remains a specialist in his particular department."—Carl R. Gray, president, Union Pacific Railroad.

MIDDLETOWN, O., July 13.—An automobile stolen several days ago from Michael Wyatt, this city, was recovered today near Franklin. It had been destroyed by fire. Residents said they saw a man and girl alight from the car, shortly before it was seen to burst into flames.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, July 14.—In 1897 a malefactor was being tried in the state of Massachusetts on a charge of murder. His last name was Ivory. The prosecution rested its case after a terrific summing up of the evidence. The case that day was not given to the jury.

William Seaver Woods was writing heads on the Springfield Republican. He wrote a head over the story of the trial that day which read, "Ivory's Hope Sinks."

This pun attracted the attention of a New York magazine publisher. He telegraphed to find out who wrote the head. When he got the name, he wired Woods to come on to New York to talk over the proposition he had to offer concerning a job.

Woods came to New York. He is now the editor of the Literary Digest.

Rollin Lynde Hart, who used to be a preacher and who is now a magazine writer, has just read "Elmer Gantry" by Sinclair Lewis. I asked him what he thought of it. "Part of it is very true," said Hart. "As a work of realism it has a very accurate description of a stove."

The Fortieth street store of the Woolworth ten-cent emporiums is also on Fifth avenue and it is unique among the nickel and dime stores in the class of customers it attracts. Handsome men, garbed in what the popular notion is of what the well-dressed man should wear, may be seen there buying ash trays, decorative candles, novel toys, or bits of household wear and work tools. Great dames, with immense bosoms covered with ropes of pearls may be seen loading up the arms of uniformed chauffeurs accompanying them with material for curtains, cheap silverware, glassware, and what not.

Dogs are always prominent on Fifth avenue and in Central Park, and it seems to be highly fashionable for young women to walk along the avenue with chows, Pekingeses, bulldogs, terriers, and police dogs on leashes. Yesterday I observed a lass of the sort who has tea almost every afternoon at the Ambassador, the Ritz or the Plaza, following no less than three dogs on leashes. And I must say she managed them very well in the crowd.

At an Eighth avenue tea room the other night a ribald and amusing inebriate took shelter under the awnings of the terrace in the rear of the tea shop. A heavy rain was falling. The drunk engaged some of the patrons in conversation. The proprietress, a lady of great firmness, announced the inebriate and bade him begone. He was, she feared, annoying her paid guests. The drunk surveyed the bizarre Greenwich Village restaurant with its brisk Japanese waiters trotting silently to and from the kitchen, and shouted loudly, "I'm going, but I wish you success with your Chinese restaurant."

He reeled across Macdougall alley, with his pink tinted geranium adorned houses, and added, as a parting shot, in falsetto: "What time d'you serve tea?"

The patrons were amused, but not the proprietress.

A cop on duty in Washington Square late the other night was startled by an apparition. He thought for a moment he was seeing ghosts. On closer scrutiny, the Regain Health this Way!

There is a right way to regain health—if you are anemic, weak, nervous and run-down, because of thin, watery blood and deficient gland activity.

The way is easy, pleasant, prompt. It is scientific, for it deals with supplying the elements needed by the system. The method has been used successfully 15 years. The use of Cadomene Tablets has grown to over one million a week, by users telling others how effective the method is. There are people in your own circle who have regained lost health. Your doctor or druggist can tell you of the "miracle-like" recovery of thin, anemic, weak, nervous-run-down folks.

LAST PLACE LEAGUE TEAM TAKES WALLOP AT LEAGUE LEADERS

Championship aspirations of the Fire Department's soft ball nine were jolted from an unexpected quarter Wednesday night when the leaders in the Class B division of the Xenia Playground League were defeated 12 to 9 by the tail-end Post Office team in a well-played game.

Up to and including this contest, the Firemen had won three straight league encounters without a defeat. The victory also served to break the three-game losing streak of the mail carriers and give them their first league victory.

Firemen continue to lead the Class B division but are now perched in first place with an advantage of only half a game.

A three-run rally in the first half of the ninth inning, which broke a 9 to 9 deadlock, gave Uncle Sam's postal employees a well-earned victory.

During the early innings the lead changed hands several times. The Post Office uncovered a good pitcher in Spriggs who held the slugger Firemen scoreless in six of the nine innings. He received much better support in the field than has heretofore been accorded hurlers for the team. L. Cope performed on the knoll for the losers and was batted rather hard.

Thursday night the league-leading Junior Business Men will meet the second-place Senior Business Men.

Lineup of Firemen: Baumaister, c; L. Cope, p; Briley, 1b; J. Haller, 2b; Swartz, 3b; Buffington, ss; R. Fisher, lf; H. Haller, rf; Dickey, cf.

Post Office lineup: C. Cope, c; Love, ss; A. Lane, 1b; Spriggs, p; Gaines, 3b; McCoy, 2b; Davis, rf; Borden, lf; L. Lane, cf; W. Cope, lf.

Mrs. Bettie Mountjoy of Cincinnati was the guest Wednesday of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cosby, E. Third St.

There will be a lawn social at First A. M. E. Church, Saturday evening at 5 o'clock. Come and enjoy a good chicken supper. Chicken pie and other good things extra.

There will be no meeting of the Afternoon Club this Friday, but on Friday, July 22, instead, at Scott's summer cottage at Crystal Spring Lake. Members are asked to come early. Gertrude Lane is president and Eva Love, hostess.

Aurora Temple I. R. P. O. E. will hold a lawn fete at the home of Mrs. John McGathy, Third and Columbus Sts., Friday evening. Refreshments of all kinds will be served.

The lawn fete that will be held in the front of the Zion Baptist Church this Thursday evening is sponsored by the teachers and officers of the Sunday School and will be real recreation for all who attend.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Williamson and family of New Albion, Ind., who have been the guests of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Wright, Columbus Ave., this summer, returned to their home by motor Thursday.

MINISTERS TO HAVE CONTROL OF SUNDAY CHAUTAUQUA PLANS

The Sunday evening program at the Chautauqua will be in charge of the Ministerial Association of Xenia and local people will take part.

The services will begin at 7:30 p. m., with Dr. W. N. Shank, First M. E. Church, in charge of the devotional period. A musical program of special numbers is in charge of the music committee.

Mrs. W. H. McGervy, Mrs. W. J. Cherry and Miss Martha Anderson, will be the soloists.

The main address of the evening will be delivered by Dr. Lewis Earle Lee, Cincinnati, executive secretary of the Hamilton County Sunday School Council of Religious Education. "Childhood's Opportunity" will be Dr. Lee's subject.

Many people in Xenia are acquainted with Dr. Lee and his success in Hamilton County and Cincinnati commends him to a Xenia audience and a large hearing is desired. Dr. W. N. Shank is in charge of the ministerial association meeting.

Dr. and Mrs. Lee will motor from Cincinnati Sunday afternoon, arriving in time for the services at 7:30 p. m.

MANY GOLFERS TAKE PART IN TOURNNEY

Denied a scheduled inter-city golf match at Wilmington because the event was postponed until a later date, members of the Xenia Country Club took advantage of the half-holiday and the clear weather Wednesday afternoon to participate in a handicap tournament arranged by the tournament committee.

Players swarmed the course during the afternoon despite the sizzling heat and the fact a violent wind prevented good scores.

Then and Now

This is the story of the rise and fall of Hod Eller. From a small timer he rose to the greatest heights in baseball, reaching the climax of his career in 1919 when he pitched the Cincy Reds to victory in the 1919 World Series. Then Eller wilted. Today he's a traffic cop in Terre Haute, Ind.

THE OLD HOME TOWN

YOUNG GIRL CAUGHT DURING BANK HOLDUP

SAGINAW, Mich., July 14.—"I attempted it to obtain money for my father, who owes $1,000," Viola Harris, 19, said here today after her lone attempt to hold up the Peoples Savings Bank, a large downtown institution.

Armed with a nicked single action revolver of ancient origin, the girl entered the crowded bank, and after loitering about the lobby for 20 minutes, presented a Flint bank check on which was written: "Pay to the order of the bearer $5,000; eight $500 bills and ten $100 bills; make it snappy." The check was turned in at the window, occupied by Teller E. E. Speckhard.

When Speckhard noted the gun in the girls hand he dropped to the floor and kicked the burglar alarm. The alarm brought an officer who made the arrest.

BUSY CAMP PROGRAM PLANNED FOR FOUR H CAMP JULY 18 TO 23

An insight into the crowded activities of one day at the 4-H Club Camp at Antioch Glen, Yellow Springs, July 18-23 is given in the program of events made public. Each day of club life will be full of "life, pep and activity" according to County Agent J. R. Kimber.

Each day and each hour in the day from sunrise to sunset there is something planned for the campers. The following will feature the 4-H Camp program:

Story telling, art appreciation, leather work, music, games, surveying, life saving, swimming, flag raising, vespers, campfire and reading.

The camp life endeavors to develop equally the four H's of club work, namely: head, heart, hand and health, Mr. Kimber pointed out.

Among the outstanding attractions of the camp will be the presence of G. F. Queen of West Virginia, a noted naturalist and author of many books on nature.

Wednesday of camp week will be "All-County Picnic Day" at the camp site.

Below is a program for each day in camp:

6:30 a. m. Rising whistle or bugle.
6:45 a. m. Flag raising, setting up exercises.
7:30 a. m. Breakfast.
8:30 a. m. Police up grounds, tents and cots, Rest.
9:00-11:00 a. m. Classes—group instruction.
11:00 a. m. Quiet hour, inspection of tents, swimming.
12:00 Noon, dinner.
1:30 p. m. Games, hikes, and supervised recreation.
3:00 p. m. Assembly—short talks on leadership.
4:00 p. m. Swimming.
5:00 p. m. Get ready for supper.
6:00 p. m. Supper.
7:30 p. m. Vespers.
8:00 p. m. Doings around the camp fire.
9:15 p. m. Get ready for bed.

CASE DISMISSED

Probate Judge S. C. Wright dismissed a charge of reckless driving against Harrison Johnson following a trial in Probate Court Wednesday morning. Lack of evidence caused the dismissal. Johnson had pleaded not guilty.

CONTRIBUTOR TELLS ABOUT "TINY" SMITH LOSING BALL GAME

The Men's Bible Class of the First Reformed Bible School has been enjoying an attendance contest between two teams captained by Fred Flynn and "Tiny" Smith.

Tiny's team won the contest and as a result the losers invited the class to a picnic in Grinnell's Grove Wednesday evening.

The losers in the contest challenged the winners to a ball game. "Tiny" was again captain of one team but in the absence of Fred Flynn, Chester Hinkle captained the other. There were about eighteen players on each team and some of the men were in danger of being hit with the ball.

Stiles was struck once but wasn't hurt much. Dr. J. A. Voder was umpire and E. Lightheiser was timekeeper. After playing about fifteen innings time was called with "Tiny's" team losing by the score of 27 to 12.

Supper for the fatigued athletes had been prepared by the chief cooks, A. Moser, Tom Long and Lester Barnes. Talk about eats—the tables were loaded with mountains of sandwiches of every kind and flavor—stacks of "hardboiled" eggs, to say nothing of apple pie and ice cream with watermelon and lemonade and "boiling hot" coffee. And did those men eat? Well, all those piles of good things just disappeared like snowballs on the Fourth of July. It was reported that Diver Belden ate so many sandwiches and drank so much coffee that he needed help to get away from the table.

Tom Long was scheduled to make a speech but he was "too full for utterance." Most of the men left before he began to speak—and the rest of them wished that they had!

If some of the business places are not open for business as usual Thursday it is because their proprietors and clerks were playing ball and stuff joints and sore fingers to say nothing of dyspepsia will keep them from being on duty for a few days.

S.S.S. helps Nature build up red corpuscles. It improves the processes by which the blood is nourished.

"I suffered from impure blood—was weak, and I had lost so much weight, I didn't look natural. I had pimples and was also bothered with a breaking-out that itched terribly. I also had boils one after another. I tried different kinds of remedies, but nothing did me any good until a friend advised me to take S.S.S., which I did. This was some time ago. Now I feel well, and I am getting along fine. S.S.S. stopped the itching and it cured me of boils. I advise all weak and run-down people to give S.S.S. a trial. It cleans up the skin and makes you strong and fills you with energy." Mrs. J. W. Barker, 1337 Walnut Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

S.S.S. is made from the fresh roots of medicinal herbs and plants and is prepared in a scientific way in a modern laboratory. It is time-tried and reliable.

TENNIS COURTS IN PARK SOON READY

Good news to Xenia tennis devotees was broadcast Thursday with announcement that the courts in Shawnee Park would be finished and ready for players within a week.

Money donated by the W. C. T. U. is being used in getting the double courts in shape. The space has been graded and iron railing is being placed, with the screens for the backstops. The entire space has been widened to regulation size and the courts are designed to please any tennis player. The courts are located on Park Drive, opposite the John G. Baldner residence. Xenia tennis players have anxiously awaited the completion of the park courts and the announcement of the work being done is received with interest.

WORLD'S FIRST BILLIONAIRE GETS PLEASURE FROM WORKING

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHISON
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
(Copyrighted 1927 By I. N. S.)

DETROIT, July 14.—Henry Ford, the richest man in the world, the best known and the least understood, today revealed many of his innermost thoughts and intimate beliefs to International News Service.

The world's first billionaire—could refrain from ever lifting a finger but gets the most pleasure by working.

Could stay in bed all day, yet is satisfied with six hours of sleep. Believes the greatest gift of his wealth was the increased work it enabled him to do.

Stays hungry to keep his appetite on edge, yet has no favorite dish.

Could live a life of luxurious ease but prefers to work from ten to twelve hours a day.

Employs 200,000 men and likes to be the first down to work in the morning.

Owens thousands of motor cars yet likes walking as a recreation.

The possession of the greatest single fortune probably in all human history, the royal throne of a half dozen and the leadership of a half dozen industrial lines give Ford no special satisfaction.

"How does it feel to be the richest man in the world?" he was asked.

"I only feel I have a job," Ford replied, with serious mien.

"What was the greatest gift your wealth brought to you?"

"Just a bigger job to work at," the richest man said.

"What have you lost by being the richest man in the world?"

"Not a thing."

"Not even privacy, personal freedom or the opportunity to mix with people?"

"No, not a thing," Ford reiterated. "I get around all right."

"What do you enjoy most in life?"

"Having something to do, something to work at," the richest man answered without hesitation. "I like aviation now."

Then he smiled and added: "I like to be as up to date as I can. It is aviation that gives Ford the to multi-millions in three decades, has very definite ideas about how young Americans can succeed in life or business.

"Do you advise young men to marry young?" he was asked.

"I certainly do," Ford responded. "And they should get families. It gives them more experience and stability, aside from domestic happiness."

"Do you believe the young man on the farm should go to the city to seek his future?"

"There is no need for young men to leave the farms and villages," Ford replied. "Today, work and opportunity are being taken to the small towns and villages. The modern idea is to take work to the men; not the men to the work as it used to be. I feel village life in America is worth preserving and that has been the plan of the Ford Company—to take the work to the people. That is why we have water power plants in many little villages around here."

"Should the city youth go into business for himself or can he get ahead best by going into some corporation?"

"He should go into the big corporation because the opportunities there are greater," Ford declared. "There is more spread for his powers. He doesn't have to go through years of experiments as in attempting to run a business by himself. The corporation has tried out all the experiments and has his job all ready for him. And there is always room at the top for bright young men."

And to the young business man, the world's greatest business man offered this parting shot of advice: "If a young man is in business and is wise, he will pay less attention to those who flatter his self-esteem and more to those who stir his energies."

There was one more question. It was "how soon do you plan to retire from business?" but Ford did not answer. As he walked away with an agility that belied his years, one of his intimate friends replied:

"Never. Mr. Ford will always work."

QUAT-Z ARTS BALL LIVELY AND NUDE; SPENDERS SEE PARIS

By BASIL WOOD

Author of "The Frantic Atlantic," "The Paris You Don't See in The Guidebooks," Etc.

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927
PARIS, July 14.—Now that the headhunts and the hangovers have died it is possible to write a coherent account of the world's most famous annual orgy, the Quat-z-Arts Ball.

It was the seventh Quat-z-Arts ball that I had attended. It will not be the last unless I move from Paris or otherwise die.

The war now being well-established in the background I think this year's ball rediscovered the spirit of the days when the Latin Quarter was more or less Latin and the word Verdun was not to be found on cigar wrappers.

Naughty, But Nice
It is hard to describe that spirit. I think we may best call it being naughty without a consciousness of sin—a delightful faculty for which the Gauls, of course, are famous.

The answer to the Quat-z-Arts critics is that a man who is deprived but once a year is not really deprived at all.

The Quat-z-Arts is nothing more than a modern attempt to revive for one night—the times of Nero and Nebuchadnezzar and Balthazar. It is a highly successful attempt because the mere matter of sex has not greatly changed during the intervening years. We have lost a little of its suppression, that is all.

Neither is the human body much changed since the days of Sodom and Gomorrah. The effect of fermented grape-juice on the brain is also much as it was when Khayyam lived and soliloquized.

Orthodox Nudity
People who go to the Folies-Bergere to be shocked and find they can sit through four acts of nudity without a thrill know that whereas one unclothed man or woman may be a sensation, three are already ordinary and any number above ten almost orthodox.

At 4 a. m. in the Salle Wagram I counted, as well as my wife, would allow me, upwards of two thousand revellers. Of these possibly four hundred wore no clothes at all.

The effect was actually no more shocking than physical inspection at a recruit camp. But it was much more amusing. And gay.

Just Hats and Paint
Earlier in the evening the costumes were absolutely gorgeous. The period was Cambodgine, or Cochinese. Principal features of Cambodian costumes are the weird pagoda hats, occasionally twice as tall as the wearer, and the cabalistic and often disconcerting designs tattooed on the painted bodies.

Thus it was that a large number of artists came to the hall attired in little else than hats and paint, which also is strictly in accordance with the traditions of the Quat-z-Arts.

Whereas last year the paint was red and the year before yellow ochre, this year the paint was citrine or silver. Most of the men were painted from head to foot, and fellow-artists had spent hours designing the mystical symbols of the Saigons on their bare bodies.

Demand for Arrest
Ten thousand people, held back by treble cordons of smiling police, gathered to watch the artists enter the hall, exclaiming at the costumes and gasping at some unusually daring warrior passed by with his attel.

Only one person in this vast crowd gave vent to any feelings but delight. She might have stepped from a page of Sinclair Lewis.

"They ought to be arrested!" she said.

An Unlucky Canadian
This year's ball was more than usually closed to "outsiders." In 1926 tourists who paid two and three thousand francs for tickets spoiled the effect by their absolute inability to enter into the spirit of the thing.

There is a rule against spectators at the Quat-z-Arts Ball. All must join in and make merry.

Thus this year those hardy tourists who did succeed in getting hold of tickets were quickly spotted at the entrance, liberally daubed with yellow paint from a huge bucket held in readiness, and cast back in the street.

If they had female companions, however, these were immediately ushered in—providing that their costumes were appropriately indiscreet.

One incautious Canadian took his wife. He was ejected but his wife passed in, and all that night the poor devil sat shivering on the terrace of a cafe opposite, hoping against hope that his luckier half would soon come out. But it was 5 a. m. before she appeared and what he said to her is unknown.

Not Vicious
There was nothing vicious or horrid about this year's ball. A woman was quite as safe there, if she joined in the merriment, as in her own home.

But one man, an Italian, who stood scornfully on the sidelines and was heard to comment audibly that the whole thing was "disgraceful," was seized by a joyous throng of students, stripped, and then forced to drink to the health of the King of Cochinchina standing on a table!

Queen Quality
And after that we had the beauty contest, when sixty young ladies of varying pulchritude were in turn hoisted aloft so that the throng could the better judge their qualifications.

Qualifications for beauty at the Quat-z-Arts, it should be remarked, pay little attention to the face. The jury of artists examines much more attentively the limbs, feet, bust and lines of the neck. Each year's Queen of the Quat-z-Arts is a champion model for the "altogether."

Beautiful Sportswoman
I broke off there to take Fleurette (that's my wife) out to Chantilly to see one of the most beautiful women in the world win the French Derby with Mon Talisman, hailed as the greatest bit of horseflesh Europe has produced since Epinard. He won by five lengths with Semblat, crack jockey of France, actually turning around in the saddle to watch the race!

The lovely owner is Senora Martinez de Hoz, wife of the richest man in the Argentine Republic. Senor de Hoz is far more of the new aristocracy of wealth than is Henry Ford, for his wealth came from cattle and the land. It is said that he owns half of Buenos Aires.

Usually the most lavish spenders are the semi-millionaires, those who have not quite got used to the feeling of wealth. Don E. Martinez de Hoz, like the Maharajah of Kapurthala, is an exception. His mode of living is more than princely, it is regal. He is said to own ten country houses in France, England and the Argentine; two strings of racehorses, twenty-nine automobiles and three yachts.

Speaking of Spenders
Talking about spenders, a wealthy oil man and his lawyer out in California were reading a book written by a friend of mine about a tour he made in Europe.

"If we could get that man to guide us around exactly the same route we'd have a helluva time," said the millionaire.

Further he called to the publishers who answered that my friend was in Europe. Taking this as a sign from the gods the Californians came to New York and booked passage on a fast liner.

They had four days to stay in New York and, disliking taxis, the oil man strode into the Packard salesrooms one morning and, indicating a bright-green limousine in the window, inquired of a clerk:

"Can it run?"
The clerk was insulted. "Can it run!" he snorted. "That's a special job and the motor's the finest we make."

"Got anybody here who can run it?"
"Why—yes, I guess we can—" "Get it out there on the road. I'll buy it. And say—" as the clerk hastened away for the smelling salts, "get one for my friend here, too."

Just Pin-Money
They came to Europe, met my friend, made their tour and to judge by all accounts their progress across Europe has been paved with thousand-dollar bills. In recognition of the good times they had they presented my friend, the author, with stock in an oil company worth several thousand dollars.

ATTORNEY GENERAL
DEFINES LAWS FOR DEPOSITING MONEY

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—A board of education in a school district containing less than two banks is empowered to enter into a contract for the deposit of its funds with two, or more, banks located either within or outside Ohio, according to an opinion given by Attorney General Edward

C. Turner to officials of the state bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices.

"Such bank must have been determined by said board of education to be conveniently located and must, upon competitive bidding, offer the highest rate of interest of any of the banks entering into such competition," Turner has ruled. "Such interest shall not, in any case, be less than two per cent for the full time the funds, or any part thereof, are on deposit, and such bank must furnish proper security as provided by law."

"A board of education in a school district containing two, or more, banks has no authority to select as its depository bank a bank located outside the state of Ohio until, after advertising for bids for the carrying of depository accounts, the board shall determine that there has been collusion between the bidders, in which event it may reject any, and all bids and arrange for the deposit of its funds in a bank, or banks, that are conveniently located without the district, either within or without the state," Turner held.

"Such bank so selected must conform to the provisions of law with reference to the payment of interest and the furnishing of proper security," declared the attorney general.

Must Have Music

DR. HARVEY W. WILEY, FAMOUS PURE FOOD EXPERT, WHO INSISTS THAT NO LIFE IS COMPLETE WITHOUT MUSIC

By JOHN LEO COONTZ
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 14.—Pure music is an essential to a well-rounded life as food says Dr. Harvey Wiley, America's famous food expert.

Dr. Wiley, who is father of the Pure Food and Drug Act of 1906, gave expression to this view in a recent letter to Edouard Albon, director of the Washington Opera Company. The occasion was the application of Dr. Wiley for a commission of operatic concerts to be held at the national capital.

Discussing music in general Dr. Wiley declared that "the mental stimulus and enjoyment derived by me from good music has done me as much good in the course of my life as has, perhaps, any other one thing."

"When I was a student in Europe I often attended performances of grand opera and concerts and I sought the gallery. In fact I went as high up as I could get for two reasons. One was that I didn't have very much money, what with the cost of my studies and ordinary living expenses and the higher I went the cheaper the seats were. But the other was that up there I was among the real music lovers. The people knew music. They knew their operas backward and forward and they were frankly insistent on their standards."

Sang to Galleries
"And you can believe that the artists sang to the galleries as well as to those persons of more means who were seated on the floor of the theater. Those down-stairs might applaud politely even if not pleased. But not the galleries. There the hisses were as potent as the applause of the braves and vivas of approval were loud."

"The people of those countries knew their operas and other good music because they had had opportunities to hear them constantly from the time they were born. Music was a part of their daily lives."

Dr. Wiley's two sons, Harvey W. Wiley, Jr., and John Preston Wiley, fifteen and thirteen years of age, respectively, are studying the piano, and Dr. Wiley readily admits that they "are beginning to show some understanding of music and to play 'well.'"

The veteran food dictator, himself in his 83rd year, never misses a performance of an opera in the city. His huge form—he is over six feet in height—topped by an iron grey head, may be picked out immediately in any performance. He is always accompanied by his wife. "Attending the opera," he says, "is more than amusement."

FUN FOR THE WHOLE FAMILY

The Rovin' Ritzies

By Flo Frederick

When Ritzie plans come to nil they always fall back on good old Bill.

Bill had scarcely set one foot inside the Collins' back yard before he was brought to a standstill by a commanding "Sh-h-h-h—"

Quite startled upon receiving such an unusual greeting, he stood perfectly still and looked about him. There was no one in sight. That is, no one that he could see. In the center of the yard a wooden box, propped up on one side with a stick, was the only unusual thing to be seen.

"What's up now?" thought the perplexed Bill to himself. "Are they hiding from me or somebody else?"

Deciding that it was a game of hide-and-go-seek, he started to make a dash around the yard and rustle up the hiders, but had scarcely made a move before he was brought to a standstill again by that cautioning "Sh-h-h-h—"

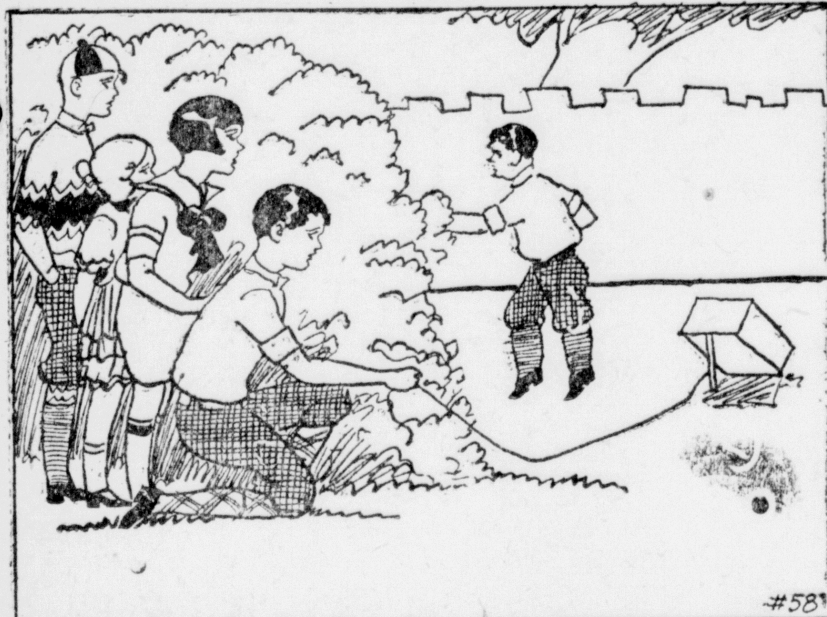

Noticing that the muffled sound came from over among the bushes, he looked close, and sure enough, there was someone hiding there, for he had seen the least bit of a movement. It was then that his from laughing. They had placed an old grocery box upside down on the lawn, propped it up on one side with a stick, and had put tempting bread crusts and grain underneath. Marty was holding the string that was tied to the stick and probably intended to give it a pull when a bird should peck at the bread crust, thus pulling the box to the ground and making the bird a prisoner.

He was about to tell Marty that the idea was all wrong when another "Sh-h-h—" from Patsy cautioned him to be silent, and looking surprised to see a Baltimore Oriole hopping towards the tempting bread crust. He was sure that it was a Baltimore Oriole, because of its orange body and black wings.

"Oh, if we could only catch it," thought each of the breathless Ritzies. "If it would only go under the box."

And then, before anyone could think, it had gone under the box and Marty had pulled the string. The box had fallen to the ground in less than a second, but hadn't there been a flutter of wings?

eye caught something that he had not noticed before. A string led from the stick that was holding up the box in the center of the yard to the very spot among the bushes where someone was hiding.

Although the string did not help to enlighten him as to what the kids were up to, he knew at least want him to make any noise. So that they were waiting for something to happen that they didn't he carefully tiptoed around the side of the yard and there came up on the whole Ritzie gang hidden among the bushes.

"What's the idea?" he asked in a whisper.

"We're trying to catch a bird," whispered Marty, who was holding the string that was tied to the box in the center of the yard.

At last it was all clear to Bill. He could see what they were planning to do and could hardly keep

Could the bird have gotten away, right from under their very eyes? Cautiously they approached the box and peeked underneath. The bird was gone. Consternation filled the little group. They were sure that everything had gone as expected, and that Marty had pulled the string at the right moment. What could have happened?

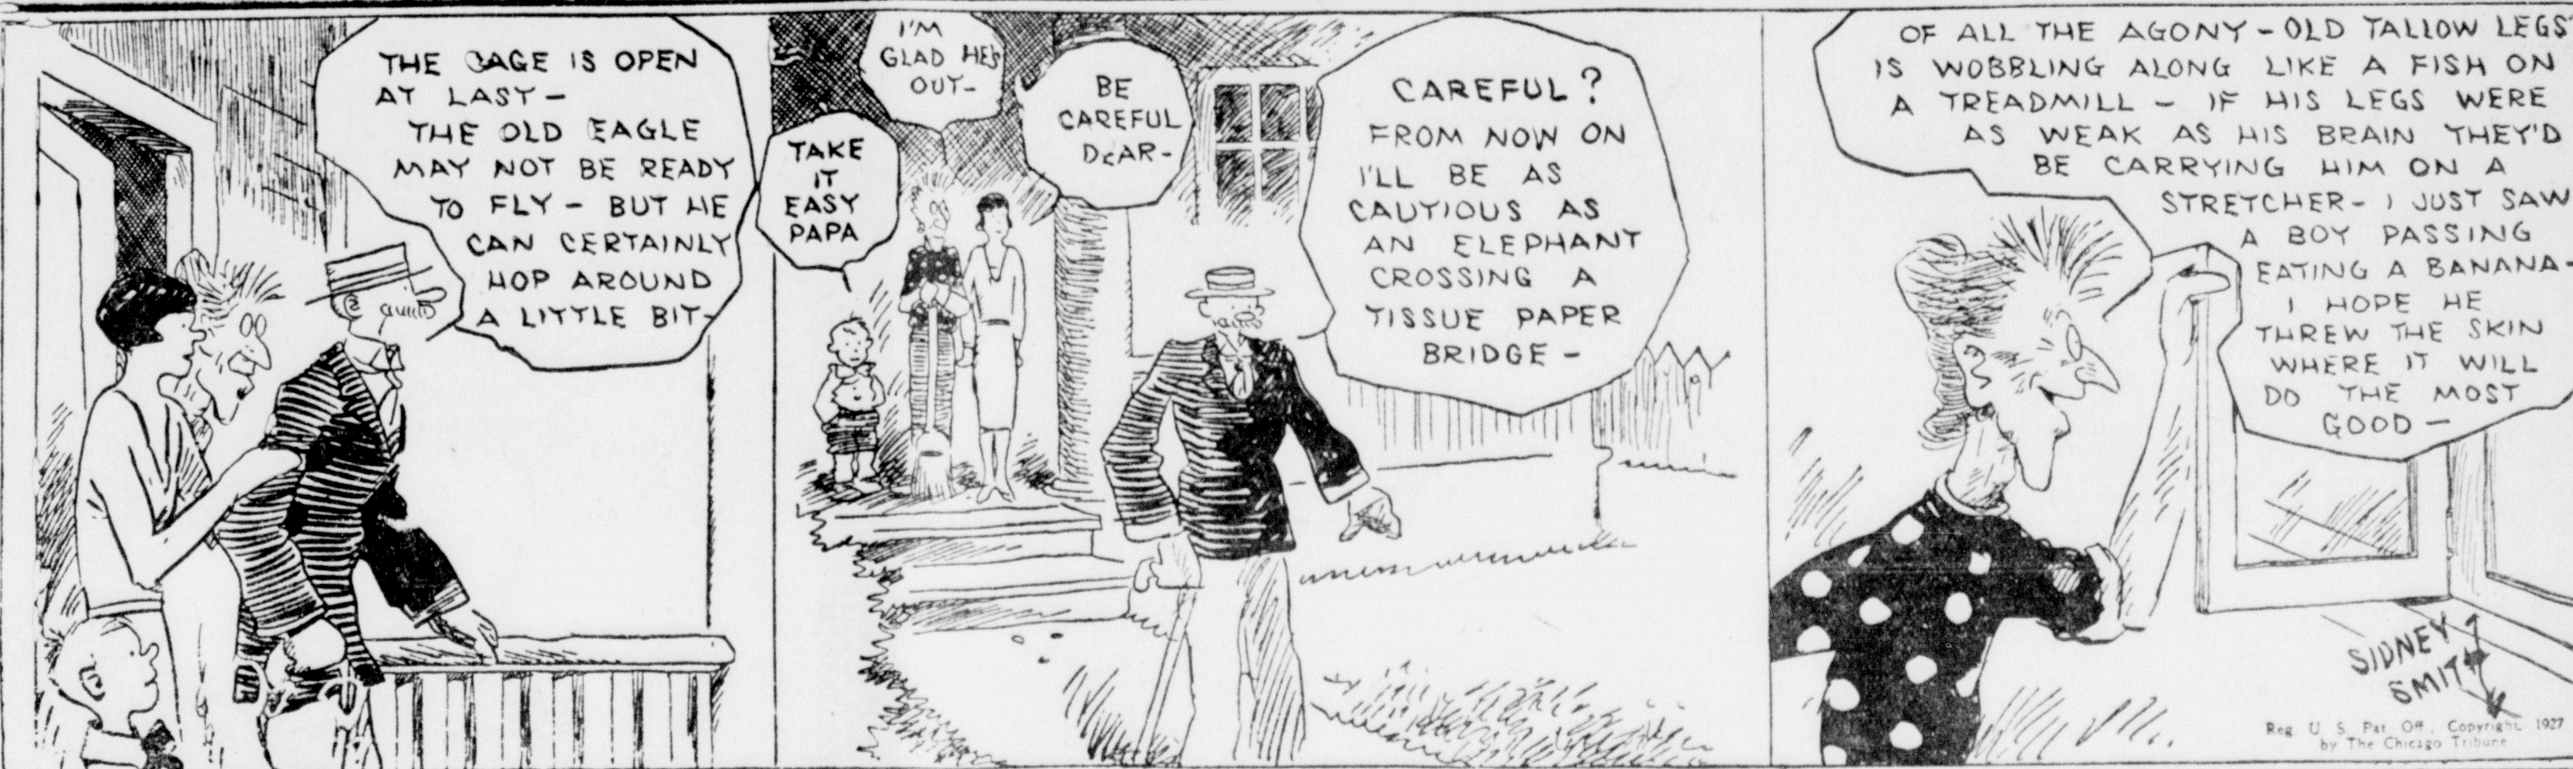

"Don't feel so bad about it," said Bill cheerfully. "You can't expect to catch a bird without a figure-four trap. They're too quick."

"But it was that beautiful orange bird," exclaimed Betty Ann, almost in tears.

"There are lots more orioles around, and anyway, this one may come back," said Bill. "I'll show you how I learned to make a figure-four trap in camp one year. We even rabbits with it."

Read about Bill's bird trap in tomorrow's story.

HIGH PRESSURE PETE

Sally's Shoulders

by BEATRICE BURTON, Author of "HER MAN," "HONEY LOU," "THE HOLLYWOOD GIRL," ETC.

CHAPTER X

SALLY saw that the only thing was to stay there and listen to what Ted Sloan had to say to her. She had known it for a long time. For months she had seen that this moment was bound to come sooner or later. This moment when Ted would set their friendship aside and insist upon making love to her. "Making a perfect fool of himself," was the way Sally put it to herself. Now that the moment was actually upon her, she was nervous and uncertain.

"Well, what do you want?" she asked him sharply. "Tell me what's on your mind, only make it snappy. And you might take your hands off my shoulders, too, if you don't mind. Because I do."

"You do what?" asked Ted, whose brain did not begin to work as fast as hers.

"I mind having your hands on my shoulders," she told him again, and she shook them off with a sudden twist of her whole body.

She leaned back against the railing and looked up at him, waiting for him to begin. After a minute or two he did.

"You make it mighty hard for me, Sally," he said dolefully. "I was going to ask you to marry me, and you tell me you hate to have my hands on your shoulders." His voice sounded hurt, and she was sorry for him all at once. . . . After all, he was a nice boy, even if he didn't want to marry her. She didn't want to marry anyone. She started to say so, and changed her mind.

"I never have liked to have anybody touch me," she said steadily. "It's not because I don't like you, Ted, because I do. Don't do that!" For he had put his arms around her and was turning her towards him with the strong pressure of his hands on her waist.

"Don't do that!" she cried out again, and tried to push him away from her. She put her hands up against his face as it came down close to her own. It seemed like the face of a stranger—an enemy—in the starry darkness. And he was going to kiss her! This stranger.

"Don't—please—" said Sally, and something of her confusion for the man suddenly let her go. She sank back against the porch railing, with her hand up to her mouth as if he actually had kissed it.

"I'm sorry," Ted apologized after a second. "I didn't know you felt this way about me. . . . I thought you liked me all this time while we've been dancing together, going to shows."

"Oh, but I do!" Sally told him solemnly. "I like you fine, Ted Sloan. And I'd rather dance with you than do anything I can think of. But I hate this!"

She spread out her arms as if to show him that what she meant by "this" was the warm darkness, the solitude, the romance of the summer night.

"I guess I'm sort of hard-hearted and cold," she finished with a little laugh.

"Cold as Greenland's icy mountains," Ted agreed with her. "You sure are, and no mistake about it!" But whether he really thought her cold or not, he was not willing to leave her right away. He stood there beside her, puffing at the pipe that he picked up from the porch rail, and went on talking in a low tone, almost as if he were talking to himself.

"You see, all along I've thought you were as keen about me as I was about you," he said. "I knew I wasn't making much money, but I knew I'd be making more pretty soon. And I thought you could keep on working for a while after we were married—and look after the house nights and mornings, like you do now for your mother. It wouldn't be so hard."

No. It wouldn't be so hard, said Sally to herself, her eyes on the dark roofs of the houses on the next street. . . . But somehow the picture that Ted was painting for her with his words wasn't the way she had always pictured her married life, when love and marriage should come to her.

She had always thought of herself as a home-maker as well as a wife and a lover. . . . She had imagined herself working all day long in a little house with a little garden somewhere. Getting together a nice little supper that wouldn't cost much but would be deliciously cooked. Rushing upstairs at the end of the day to powder her nose and fluff up her hair for the return of a husband—a husband who was certainly not Ted Sloan in her wildest dreams!

That was Sally's idea of marriage, and it had no part-time office job in it. . . . Why, getting married to Ted and working at two jobs would be almost like life as it was now. Never enough time to do anything what it should be done.

"But even that wouldn't be so bad if I loved him," thought Sally.

She turned and put her strong, capable little hands on his shoulders for just an instant.

"Ted, we're such very good friends—can't we stay friends and forget all this love stuff?" she asked him. "You don't really care for me, I'm sure of it. You just think you do."

He shook his head silently. She didn't know what the little negative movement meant, and while she was wondering he turned and went paddling down the steps to the porch below.

"Oh, you poor paluka!" Sally called after him cheerfully. She felt more cheerful, somehow, now that he was gone. "Oh, you poor paluka, why don't you let me know enough about you!"

In the little bedroom with its two beds set close to each other, Millie was waiting for her.

She was sitting beside the open window, letting the warm night breeze blow in upon her half-dry hair, and she was peacefully ripping up Sally's black satin dress with an old safety-razor blade.

"Christopher Columbus! What are you doing to my dress?" asked Sally, her eyes wide.

Millie lifted her head. "Can't you see, Dumb Dolly?" she asked in her slow, slippery little voice. "Rippin' up this dress you throw away."

"I threw away! Why, I never did any such thing!" declared Sally. "And you know it! I told you it wasn't any good the way it was, and I—"

"And you said you were through with it!" broke in Millie. She placidly ripped a few more inches of seam with her blade.

"I'm going to make a bathing suit out of it," she added. "It's no good for anything else. You can have what's left for your scrap bag."

"I can have what's left for my scrap bag! Well, that's good, isn't it?" asked Sally. She was scarlet with indignation. She had been counting on wearing that dress for another two months—until it was cold enough to buy a cloth dress for the winter.

She rushed across the room and pulled the shining black stuff from her sister's hands, rolled it up and laid it at the foot of her bed.

"My stars!" she cried, her eyes blazing. "If that isn't just like you—cutting up a good dress! What do you think I'm going to wear to work? Tar paper? Here! If you want to do any sewing you might get busy on these!" She had opened one of Millie's dresser drawers, and was flinging pair after pair of holey stockings at her. "Mend those, if you're so full of pep, and want some work to do!"

"Children! Children!" came Mrs. Jerome's voice from the open doorway. "Birds in their little nests agree!"

Every now and then she seemed to forget that her children were grown, and talked to them as if they still were the tiny things they had been years before.

In the hall behind her the telephone trilled, and Millie bounded out to answer it. The one and only time when Millie moved quickly was when she thought one of her "sweeties" might be calling her.

"He-e-e-llo!" she said now, in the honey-sweet drawl that made men think what a nice, good-natured little thing she was. "O-o-oh, it's you, Mr. Davidson? O-o-oh, I'm just fl-line—"

Sally set her lips and shook her head in honest wrath.

"Look at that!" she said to her mother in a low intense tone. "Cut up the only between-seasons dress I own to make a bathing suit out of it! Ever hear of such a thing? Now I've got to sew it all together again!"

When Millie came back to the bedroom she had evidently decided not to be on speaking terms with her sister. She pretended not to hear when Sally spoke to her. She dried her own hair, and Sally let her do it. In silence they got ready for bed. In silence they lay down and went to sleep a few feet away from each other. Sisters.

Kills Pesky Ants, Roaches and Bed-Bugs

Just pour a little P.D.Q. wherever there are bed-bugs, roaches or ants. See how quickly they die. Keep Eliminative System Active

Good Health Requires Good Elimination.

ONE can't feel well when there is a retention of poisonous wastes in the blood. This is called a toxic condition, and is apt to make one tired, dull and languid. Other symptoms are sometimes toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many people have learned the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, when the kidneys seem functionally inactive. Everywhere one finds enthusiastic Doan's users. Ask your neighbor!

Of Course If You Don't Care

IT REALLY DOESN'T MATTER

If it's a matter of indifference when guests cast appraising glances around your home and note critically the styles of long ago—

If you don't care what they think of your taste and appreciation of how a home should be dressed—

If it's all the same to you that the children would rather go to the movies or entertain themselves and their friends elsewhere because the home is so drab and "tacky."

If it's a source of pride that you drive an eight-cylinder car and keep a "one-cylinder" home—

Then of course it doesn't matter at all.

BUT MOST FOLKS DON'T FEEL THAT WAY

Most people want their homes to be as up to date and charming and comfortable as they can make them. They are willing to forget trifles for the more important things that make a home—HOME.

Our EASY PAYMENT PLAN will help you to solve the financial part and our beautiful low-priced furniture will turn your house into a HOME.

HEAT BREAKS—Many Deaths Blamed On Weather; Ohio Hit

DEATH TOLL HIGH IN COUNTRY'S BIG CITIES

Promised Rains Fail To Materialize—Many Drown

NEW YORK, July 14.—Ten persons are dead and scores are prostrated in the metropolitan district today as the result of the severest heat wave which has struck the eastern section of the country this year.

Seven of the deaths reported were in New York City proper, and one each in Newark, Jersey City and Camden, N. J.

In New York, the mercury reached a high level of 91.

PITTSBURGH, July 14.—A break in the heat wave was promised western Pennsylvania today by the U. S. Weather Bureau here, after the torrid spell had taken a toll of one dead by drowning and two overcome by heat.

Paul Houser, 12, drowned at Meadville, Pa., in French Creek. Joseph Morits, Homestead, and George Lesko, Pittsburgh, were taken to hospitals when they were overcome by intense heat.

HARRISBURG, Pa., July 14.—With six deaths and scores of prostrations directly attributed to the record breaking heat wave which has held Pennsylvania in its grip for the past two days, the weatherman, who yesterday had promised relief in some sections of the state today was less hopeful.

PHILADELPHIA, July 14.—Two men died yesterday in Philadelphia when the thermometer registered 93 degrees for a new high mark of the year. One heat prostration was reported.

Bucks County reported one death when a farmer was overcome while storing his hay crop.

Another heat death occurred in West Chester.

Five persons were overcome at Wilmington, Del., when the temperature reached 95 degrees.

Camden, N. J., reported one heat death.

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Ohio today was recovering from its second heat wave of the year which yesterday mounted to 97 and averaged above 90 over the state. Sandusky on Lake Erie reported a temperature of 97. Youngstown reported 96. Promised rains did not materialize, though brisk breezes offered relief from the heat.

A cement worker, Alfred Chapin, 56, was overcome late Wednesday while at work, and died. Herman Frontstone, 15, drowned while bathing in a creek near here.

CHICAGO, July 14.—With eight persons dead in the wake of a two-day heat wave, cool breezes from the lake today sent the thermometer cascading from a high mark of 91 degrees.

Three were drowned in Lake Michigan seeking relief from the torrid wave.

BOSTON, July 9.—Three deaths were reported in New England today as a result of the record heat wave.

PALESTINE QUAKE DAMAGE $1,500,000

JERUSALEM, Palestine, July 14.—Rendering 1,000 persons homeless and bringing death to several hundred others, Monday's earthquake wrought damages estimated at more than $1,500,000 in Palestine and trans-Jordania, latest available estimates showed today.

A check-up showed that the casualties in Palestine proper will not exceed 150, although many hundreds were injured. In Nabulus, the deaths have been fixed at sixty, and as reports continued to come in from outlying towns in the affected area of trans-Jordania, indications were that the death list would approximate 400.

The Hebrew university in Jerusalem was among the greatest sufferers, the destruction of laboratories and the resulting interruption of work causing a loss of $50,000.

MAYORS TO RACE TO PLEASE GOVERNORS

LANSING, Mich., July 14.—An airplane race between Mayor John W. Smith, of Detroit, and Mayor William B. Thompson, of Chicago, was announced today as one of the features of the conference of governors at Mackinac Island, beginning July 25.

Mayor Smith with Paul Straub, burg as pilot and Mayor Thompson with M. M. Meigs, a Chicago publisher as pilot, will start from Detroit and Chicago an hour apart July 24 allowing the Chicago mayor an hour's lead to compensate for the difference in distance.

WHERE TWO WOMEN WERE HACKED TO PIECES

New York police are working to solve the mystery in one of the most gruesome murders in years. Bodies of two women were found hacked to pieces in the basement at 28 Prospect Place, Brooklyn, shown above. One was identified as that of Miss Sarah Elizabeth Brownwell (above), sixty-five. Below are shown some of the blood-stained tools found in the basement, on which police hoped to find fingerprints.

BOBBY JONES STILL COMMANDS

BRITISH OPEN GOLF TOURNEY

American Turns In Card One Better Than Par For Second Round Thursday—British Golfer Follows Closely.

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland, July 14.—Bobby Jones still commands the British open golf championship, at the end of the second round.

Shooting one better than par today, Jones turned in a 72 for the second round, which, coupled with his marvelous 68 of yesterday gives him an aggregate of 140.

B. Hodson, of Tenby, is on Jones' heels with an aggregate of 142, but two strokes advantage in this tournament is worth a lot and the experts who picked Jones to win are already beginning to say "I told you so."

Jones was off with a splendid drive but he over-ran the green with his approach and had a five for the hole. The next three holes he reeled off in par figures. At the fifth Jones had a bit of luck for his second shot was bound for a bunker when it struck a potato that had found its way on to the course and the ball hopped on to the bunker. A birdie three at the sixth and a par four at the seventh helped his card. At the eighth the champion pulled his drive but he made a nice recovery and holed a par three. Again his drive was pulled at the ninth and his approach was excellent but he took three puts for a five. Jones' card out 5-4-4-5-3-4-3-3-37.

John G. Anderson, of the Winged Foot Club, of New York, had an 80 for an aggregate of 163.

Archie Compson went out in par 36 today. He looked like a sensation. Then, tried professional that he is, he did what any duffer can do—took a 10 for the par five fourteenth. For the encouragement of the duffer his card is presented: Out 4-5-4-4-4-4-3-4-3-36. In 3-2-5-4-10-5-4-5-4-42.

WASHINGTON JEWS REJECT APOLOGY

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Jews in the capital refuse to accept Henry Ford's apology.

At a mass meeting last night, attended by representatives of all the Jewish organizations in Washington, a resolution commending Ford for his retraction of things said about the race, failed of passage by a vote of 37 to 23.

Rabbi George Silverstone apparently spoke the majority sentiment when he said:

"What Ford has done cannot be remedied with words."

HOOPER WILL HEAD DAYTON HOSPITAL

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Announcement of the appointment of Dr. C. O. Kirk, of the University of Arkansas, as superintendent of the Ohio Institution for Feeble-Minded at Orient, near here was made today by John E. Harper, state director of welfare.

Dr. Kirk, a professor in nervous and mental diseases, succeeds Dr. E. L. Hooper, transferred to the superintendency of the state insane hospital at Dayton. Kirk is a former superintendent of the Arkansas hospital for treatment of nervous diseases. He also, was an assistant physician at the Toledo state hospital.

FANATICS BURN TO DEATH IN CHURCH

BERLIN, July 14.—Fourteen religious fanatics locked themselves in the Orthodox Church in Kustanai, Siberia, set fire to the building and burned to death, according to dispatches from Omsk.

The fanatics left a manifesto declaring they had sacrificed themselves to save their country from the Bolsheviks.

AIR MAIL PILOT TO ACCOMPANY BERTAUD ON FLIGHT TO ROME

NEW YORK, July 14.—James De Witt Hill, pilot on the air mail route between New York and Cleveland for the last three years, has been selected as the companion of Lloyd Bertaud in the giant monoplane, "Old Glory" on her flight to Rome and return, it was announced today.

Hill, whose record tells of more than 5,000 hours in the air, was chosen, backers of the flight said, because he has shown himself a veteran of the skies who has never deserted his plane in time of distress, "J. D." as he is familiarly called, has faced death eight times in the air, when ice, or aleet, or snow have forced his plane to earth, but not once has he abandoned his ship for the safety of a parachute.

The New York to Rome flight is sponsored by William Randolph Hearst.

CHARGES OF FIRING TEN EMPLOYEES WILL REACH STATE BOARD

Intensive Probe May Follow—Charge Retaliation Program

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Announcement was made today that, at a session starting at 10 a. m. next Wednesday, the state board of control will pass upon the question of approving the payroll for the state supported Combined Normal and Industrial School at Wilberforce University near Xenia.

Action on the payroll was deferred pending consideration by the board of plans for improving the work of the school.

Charges that ten officials of the state-supported Combined Normal and Industrial Department of Wilberforce University including professors and other employees of long standing, were discharged by the school's separate board of nine trustees without being offered an explanation, will be aired at a hearing before the state board of control in Columbus sometime next week.

This announcement is made by State Representative R. D. Williamson.

Dismissal of the ten university men is alleged to have been the result of a "house cleaning" conducted by university heads in retaliation for testimony the men are said to have given at a recent inquiry conducted by State Examiner Brown, of the state auditor's office, into alleged irregularities in the administration of state funds.

It is charged that all university employees had been warned that they would lose their positions should they testify at the examiner's inquiry.

The ten officials are said to have not been advised of their dismissal until June 11. Two were later reinstated.

Four of the eight discharged men who will be accorded an opportunity to explain their position at the hearing next week, according to Representative Williamson, are William T. Hughes, former instructor in the commercial division since 1925; Professor Denbigh, J. D. Newsome, chief engineer for sixteen years, and Theodore Clayton Carter, executive secretary to Superintendent R. C. Bundy, whose position was abolished.

Representative Williamson forecasts an intensive investigation of the administration of the normal school.

PLANS NEW FLIGHT

PARIS, July 14.—Captain Diodonne Coste, former holder of the endurance record for airplanes, announced today his intention of making a nonstop flight to New York within the next week or ten days.

HOME OF JUDGE WHO SENTENCED THREE MURDERERS IS FORCIBLY ENTERED

JOLIET, Ill., July 14.—Three men broke into the home here today of Judge Frederick A. Hill, who imposed sentence upon the three desperate convicted murderers sentenced to hang tomorrow for the murder of Deputy Warden Peter M. Klei.

The men, believed by authorities to have been prompted in their raid by Walter Stalesky, Charles Duchowski, and Robert Torrez, who have been ordered to the gallows, were routed by the jurist's son, John Hill.

That Robert Torrez may escape sentence tomorrow was seen as a possibility in the actions of J. X. Mondragon, Mexican consul of Chicago, who asked that Judge Hill rule upon a petition of insanity.

FATHER SLAYS SON

PITTSBURGH, July 14.—Crazed by moonshine liquor, William Besock, Sr., 51, hotel proprietor here, shot and killed his son, William, Jr., 24, according to a confession police said Besock made today.

INFANT SUFFOCATED

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Funeral arrangements were being made here today for June Goodykintz, 2, who was suffocated last night when she fell in an outdoor vault.

WAGES THE SAME

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 14.—Wages of sheet and tin workers will remain unchanged during July-August period as result of bi-monthly examination of sales prices held recently. The average price of black sheets was found to have been $3.8 a hundred pounds, unchanged from previous examination period.

EIGHTEEN DISCOURAGED RAIN DROPS FALL

Good things frequently come to small packages and a super-heated populace should be thankful for small favors.

Paraphrased adages such as these were dusted off and exposed to the public gaze Thursday after thirty cents worth of rain was served in capsules to parched Xenians.

The slight rainfall came up at noon without warning and left prematurely without remaining for luncheon. It sprinkled slightly with the

YOUNG TEACHER AND FLYER RESUME TRIP

CHICAGO, July 14.—Miss Mildred A. Doran, school teacher, of Flint, Mich., hopped off from Checkerboard Field here today on the second leg of her proposed flight from California to Hawaii.

The plane, piloted by Augie Pedlar, rose into the air without a mishap. The destination was Tulsa, Okla. William F. Maloska, wealthy Flint business man, who is backing the trans-Pacific hop was a third passenger.

Miss Doran plans to arrive in Long Beach, Cal., after short flights and contemplates hopping off for Honolulu August 11.

The plane is a special type with a single Wright whirlwind motor similar to the one used by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh. It is capable of a sustained flight of more than fifty hours, according to its designers.

HAWAIIAN FLYERS COMING TO CHICAGO

SAN FRANCISCO, July 14.—Lieuts. Lester Maitland and Albee Hegenberger, the first men to fly to Hawaii, will leave for Chicago and Milwaukee tonight or tomorrow.

The aviators were guests of hotel or at a Shriners' luncheon today. The trip to Chicago will be made by train. After a short stop in Milwaukee, Maitland's home town, the flyers will report to Trub Davidson, assistant secretary of war for aviation, in Washington.

FEATURES OF CHAUTAUQUA HERE

The Filipino Collegians and Arthur Waiwyn Evans, the distinguished Welsh orator, headline the attractions on the opening day of Xenia's Redpath Chautauqua in Shawnee Park Thursday afternoon and night.

With a great variety of native instruments and with appropriate stage settings, the interesting group from the Philippines entertained Thursday afternoon with a popular concert.

The Collegians will also be on the program with special scenic and lighting effects at Thursday night's performance, preceding the address by the Welsh orator on "What America Means to Me."

Mr. Evans is not unknown to Xenia audiences, having been heard a few months ago on the Central High School Lyceum course program.

During his twenty-four years in Great Britain, he was privileged to meet the great men of the day and took full advantage of the opportunity to study social and political conditions at first hand.

The Chautauqua season in the afternoon began at 3 o'clock and the evening program will start at 8 o'clock.

Mrs. Louise McIntyre, author of the book "How's Your Health?" and founder of the McIntyre Health System, will deliver a health lecture at 10:30 o'clock Friday morning on Chautauqua's second day on the subject, "Keeping Fit."

With a delightful humor and practical suggestions, Mrs. McIntyre will emphasize the importance of good health.

Mrs. McIntyre will also speak in the afternoon on "How's Your Health?"

The re-making of a selfish man is the theme of the play, "A Message from Mars," to be produced Friday night. The central figure is Horace Parker. He is rich in material wealth, but a pauper in the spirit of sympathy and charity for his fellow-men.

He tries to escape the armored messenger from Mars, who appears in a dream, but the visitor clutches him with a powerful hand and leads him through never-to-be-forgotten experiences.

Chautauqua will present another headline lecturer next Tuesday night, July 19, in Ralph Parlette, humorous philosopher, just returned from a world tour.

Chautauqua feels fortunate that Parlette is willing to devote a few weeks to its platform. Returning May 25 from a world tour, he hurried to his headquarters in Chicago, delivered the name of a new book to his publisher, and reported for his speaking tour. His humorous talk will be regarded as one of the high spots of the week's program.

Private in Guard Company may face military charges.

Because of a technical error in the warrant upon which he was arrested in Dayton and returned to Xenia Tuesday on a charge of publicly refusing to attend the summer training camp, Private Joseph Somerville, of Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, was released from the County Jail Wednesday by Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy on a writ of habeas corpus, filed by Attorney F. L. Johnson.

Somerville was immediately re-arrested upon leaving the Court House by Captain Ozel Cornwell, commanding officer of the guard unit, and placed under guard at the company's armory on E. Main St., pending court martial proceedings.

It was announced that the warrant did not contain the specific charge to be placed against the private at the court martial—that of "verbally abusing" the commanding officer of the company.

The warrant was issued by the company's summary court officer to the Montgomery County sheriff.

Somerville was arrested in Dayton, returned to Xenia and was lodged in jail from Tuesday noon to Wednesday noon.

Since Company L does not leave for its fifteen-day summer training period at Camp Perry, O. until Saturday, July 16, Judge Gowdy ruled that the private's mere declaration of refusal to attend the camp does not constitute an offense because the guard unit has not already departed.

Somerville came to Xenia in April and accepted employment as cook at the O. S. and S. O. Home, joining Company L soon afterward. Recently he has been working in Dayton as a painter. His home is in Alabama.

PRIMARY LAW DOES
NOT COVER SCHOOL
BOARD CANDIDATES

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—Ohio's primary laws do not apply to nomination of candidates for member of a school board, Attorney General Turner held, in an opinion given Secretary of State Brown.

Such candidates must be mentioned by petition, Turner ruled.

Ohio laws decree that nomination of candidates for the office of member of a board of education shall be made by nominating papers duly signed by not less than twenty-five electors of the school district, of either sex, for each candidate to be nominated in village districts, and in city school districts by not less than two per cent of the electors voting at the next preceding general school election in such city school district according to Turner.

Nominations of candidates for the office of member of a county board of education, Turner ruled, shall be made by petition signed by petitioners who shall be qualified electors residing in the county school district, not less in number than one per cent of the electors voting at the last preceding election for members of local boards of education in the districts within the county school district and not less than twenty-five in any case.

Candidates for member of the board of education in rural school districts must be nominated by nominating papers duly signed by not less than twenty-five qualified electors of said rural school district for each candidate to be nominated in the district, Turner held.

Shelving added to county library.

The new shelving ordered for the main section of the Greene County District Library is now installed and in use. This additional shelf space provided room, not only for bound issues of magazines but for the unbound volumes, as well, Miss Mildred W. Sandoe, district librarian, points out.

The reference books also have been housed in the large front reading room, leaving the small back room for a non-fiction room. This made more room in the stacks and it is now possible to add new books and to find room for them in their right places on the shelves, Miss Sandoe says.

Prohibition helps.

CEDAR POINT, O., July 14.—Reports submitted during twenty-ninth annual convention National Confectionery Salesmen's Association of America here recently showed more candy is being eaten than ever before, that demand has been increasing steadily since the war and prohibition and that indications favor increase.

The Theatre

By FLEET SMITH
NEW YORK, July 14.—The "Great White Way" is now "The Great White Movie Way." And the movie signs have made it so. From Forty-second Street at Times Square all the way up to Columbus Circle at Fifty-ninth St., Broadway is virtually one huge electric light, sending thousands upon thousands of watts of electricity into the heavens and along the avenue; a gorgeous electric rainbow, with millions of bulbs gleaming and glittering and actual scenes pictured in electric lights and in relief.

Ever since Paramount startled New York with its tremendous sign on "The Covered Wagon" back in 1923, the movie houses along Broadway have outdone each other in searching for the most striking and brightest electrical effects. "The Covered Wagon," depicted in its huge sign, the trek of the horse and oxen teams across the desert, the whole effect lighted beyond description. Then came the "Ten Commandments," when the exterior and interior of the George M. Cohan was done in blue, to the amazement of passersby and theatergoers. "The King of Kings" sign which depicts the Gaiety Theatre now, is generally reported to have cost in the neighborhood of $35,000 and "The Big Parade," with its enormous letters in electricity is said to have cost $17,000.

Paramount is now working on a startling electric sign to decorate the Criterion Theatre at 44th St. for "Wings," which opens there on August 1. I am told that the sign, which will undoubtedly cost several thousand dollars, is going to depict, in relief, a tremendous battle in the air, with airplanes flying, falling in flames to the earth; and the whole accompanied by real propellers whirling and electric lights glittering. It is to be a real "show in the street." The vogue for startling effects in electric signs perhaps is the reason for the popularity, among theater managers, of pictures with short titles. One word picture titles are the joy and delight of theatre managers because the best effects can be obtained with electric signs. James Cruise, manager of the Rivoli Theatre, gave an example recently of what can be done with a one-word title when he built probably the largest electric sign in the world and placed it all the way across the front of his theater to exploit "Chang" Paramount's melodrama of the jungles. And of course one word signs don't run up large electric light bills.

Which reminds me of the story of the road show manager who went out into the "Sticks" with a show called "Zaza," a few years ago. The show was in a small Ohio town and during the middle of the week the manager of the local theater asked him for $4,000 expense money to pay for the electric sign "Zaza" in front of the theater. He protested $4000 was away too much for a one word sign burning but a week. "I know," said the local manager, "but this $4000 is to pay for the sign we had up for the show last week." "What in the world played here that carried such a title as to eat up $4000 worth of electricity in a week?" asked the roadshow manager. "Sir Johnson Forbes-Robertson in 'The Passing of the Third Floor Back,'" he was told.

Graveyard for Pets

Mayor F. W. Donnelly of Trenton, who has provided a pet cemetery, as a memorial to canary which cheered his moments of depression.

By MARION M'ROBERT

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927

TRENTON, N. J., July 14.—Because a gay little canary with its nightly song and frolic made life happier for the hardest worked man in this busy town, boys and girls of Trenton are to have a beautiful cemetery in which to inter their pets when the latter have passed on to whatever reward comes to dog, cat and bird pals who fulfill their mission in life.

The pet cemetery is the gift of Mayor F. W. Donnelly for twenty years mayor of Trenton. It comprises several acres of woodland and meadow, owned by the city. Officials say the ground will not be needed in the city's plans for growth for generations to come and so it is to be turned over to the S. P. C. A. to be made into a burial ground in memory of the bird that was the mayor's constant companion for several years.

In the rearing of his own husky boy and girls the mayor has had many loved pets in his family. There was Mike, an Irish terrier, who knew every corner of the city and made friends with everybody. Mike was the most democratic of dogs and would have made a wonderful campaigner for his services had ever been needed in that direction. There were other dogs, too, not quite so well known to the public, and any number of cats and their progeny. None were nearer to the heart of their master however than the little bird.

Feathered Sympathizer.

It seemed to save his sweetest song for him and no matter what hour of the day or night he came home the bird would flutter about its cage until he took it out for play. Then, perched on his finger, it voiced its happiness at his home coming. Through the dark two years that threatened him with invalidism the remainder of his life its song cheered him, and when politics and city affairs grew oppressive with their intricacies he had at least one bright hour to look forward to, he declared.

And then came the day when the little bird could sing no more and the next day the master carefully placed it in a small box and buried it in a wee grave in his yard. Ever since that time Mayor Donnelly says the sight of the tiny grave brings a lump in his throat.

In his talks with children they have often told him about pets that have died and they have expressed the wish that the dog or cat could have been buried somewhere where they might visit the grave "and show that we still remember and love." So the mayor looked about him and after discussing the idea with city officials it was agreed that the vacant plot of ground be placed at the disposal of pet lovers. The S. P. C. A. will improve the place and help to keep it a beauty spot.

He Drove Lincoln

During the historic Lincoln-Douglas tour in the famous presidential campaign of 1859, W. N. Wiley, of The Dallas, Ore., now 88 years old, drove the wagon in which both candidates traveled the country, holding joint debates in each town they reached.

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927 THE DALLAS, Ore., July 14.—Historians and biographers made a great discovery here the other day. A party of visitors, including several prominent writers on historical subjects, found W. N. Wiley, one of the best-known characters in The Dallas, who was the driver of the Lincoln-Douglas wagon.

That "Old Bill" Wiley was the Lincoln-Douglas wagon driver means nothing at all to the younger generation, but the oldsters remember, without the slightest difficulty, the famous Lincoln-Douglas campaign, one of the most remarkable political forays in the history of the country, and the fact that the man is still alive who drove the contesting candidates throughout their tour is of keen interest to Americans who remember the hectic days of the Lincoln campaign.

There were no private trains for political candidates then. Abraham Lincoln and Stephen Douglas, bitter political opponents and rivals for the presidential office, were compelled to move slowly from town to town, seated in a covered wagon behind a sturdy team of horses. Wiley was the driver.

Naturally the venerable teamster became closely acquainted with both men, and he greatly enjoys recalling his reminiscences of the historic tour whenever he can find an audience.

Wiley is now 88 years old. For so aged a citizen he is hale and hearty, works every day around his small farm, and devotes the evenings chiefly to talks with friends of travelers on the tremendous advantages enjoyed in the good old days.

ACTION TO RECOVER POSSESSION FILED HERE; OTHER NEWS

John Weir Cooper, Margaret Ione Cooper and Margaret Ballentine are plaintiffs in a suit filed in Common Pleas Court against Frances and Bernard Klein, charging the defendants are illegally possessing a farm of 118.99 acres owned by the plaintiffs in Xenia Twp.

Plaintiffs complain they have had possession of the farm in question now occupied by the defendants ever since they purchased it and their predecessors in the title owned and occupied the premises for more than twenty-one years.

Petition charges the defendants began cutting hay, have torn down fences, that they are about to remove the hay already cut and are attempting to appropriate a certain strip of land on the west side of the farm.

It is claimed the defendants have no right to the land or to dispute the strip of ground on the west side, but that they nevertheless, refuse to vacate the farm.

Plaintiffs were granted a temporary restraining order by the court, enjoining the defendants from removing property from the farm. Such damages as the court may determine they are entitled to under the circumstances are also sought in the petition. Miller and Finney are attorneys for the plaintiffs.

TRANSFER ORDERED

Probate Court has approved an application of Beatrice Lowry, formerly Beatrice Trubee, for an order of the court directing that certain funds invested by Walter J. Chambliss, as administrator of the estate of B. F. Chambliss, deceased, be turned over to her as the person entitled to them. The court decided she is entitled to the sum in question, $57.34 invested in running stock in the Peoples Building and Savings Co. in the name of J. Carl Marshall, as probate judge, and ordered this amount transferred to her.

APPOINT ADMINISTRATORS

J. A. Finney has been appointed administrator of the estate of J. Q. A. Baker, late of Jamestown, in Probate Court, and has filed bond of $1,000. Frank Shigley, D. E. Bailey and J. Harve Sanders were named appraisers.

John Allen has been named administrator of the estate of John Hardy Manley, late of Xenia, with $1,500 bond.

ONE THERMOMETER SHOWS 100 DEGREES

The weather forecaster was partially vindicated Thursday in his guess that cooler temperatures and thunderstorms would break the monotonous hot spell of recent days.

It rained sufficiently long Thursday noon to dampen the streets

but the shower was of short duration and Xenians resigned themselves to a continuation of torrid heat.

Street level heat was near the boiling point Wednesday and the hot rays of the sun chased the ever fluctuating mercury to a new peak for the summer. Thermometers indicated as high as ninety-five degrees and one did even better, or worse, and registered an even 100. Citizens believed readily enough this thermometer was the more accurate.

"Cloudy" is the rather hopeful outlook for Friday.

County commissioners are not authorized, under Ohio law, to purchase, with county funds, burglary or hold-up insurance, or insurance against forgery, for the protection of the county treasurer, the attorney general held, in another ruling to the state bureau of inspection of public officers.

An owner of livestock injured, or killed, by a dog belonging to such owner is not entitled to receive compensation from the county funds for the injury to such livestock, Turner held in an opinion given to Prosecuting Attorney W. M. McKenzie, Chillicothe.

"Where the owner of livestock injured or killed, by a dog not belonging to such owner, presents a claim to the township trustees, who hear such claim, make an allowance thereof, and transmit their findings to the board of county commissioners," Turner continued, "the county commissioners alone may decide whether such claim shall be allowed, in whole, or in part, but the commissioners' action is subject to review by the probate court on appeal."

COMPETITION BRINGS PERFECTION

Long ago someone said: "Competition is the life of trade."

It was a smart remark, quoted down through the years.

We might change it about, and say: Competition is the trade of life.

There is so much talk about brotherhood and co-operation and service that we are in danger of forgetting that without individual effort, all these are but meaningless words.

Every man's job is to do the thing he has to do better than anyone else can do it.

The fine old poet, Edwin Markham, once said: "We have committed the Golden Rule to memory; let us now commit it to life. We have preached brotherhood for centuries; we now need to find a material basis for brotherhood."

The material basis for brotherhood is the perfection of each by individual effort.

Our work is, first, to do well, and second to co-operate.

Competition is, indeed, the trade of life.

There is a great deal of bunk written about co-operation.

Of what use is co-operation if there is no personal perfection, or at least the striving for personal perfection?

It is healthy to try and outdo the other man, so long as the spirit is friendly and not hateful.

Competition has produced the best examples of public service in the world. Competition has produced the best type of private service.

Competition has produced the best man.

Competition is the trade of life.

The Way of the World

RACING LIGHT BEAMS

Prof. Michelson, world-famous scientist of Chicago university, makes fascinating experiments to find the exact speed of light. Rays of light are raced between revolving mirrors on mountain tops or shot through pipe lines. The knowledge of the universe is thus increased.

Fortunate for us, there are a few people more interested in racing light beams than in racing horses.

THEY USED THEIR HEADS

Between 150 and 200 millions of dollars were saved in the last five years in a large American city because of the use of arbitration in the building trades. Strikes have been prevented, work has gone on, the public has been protected.

Men can do wonders when they use their heads instead of their fighting muscles.

MEN WANT INSPIRATION

Roger Babson, nationally-known economist, has been telling preachers some things. He asks pastors to try trying to compete with experts in other lines. Men and women go to church to worship, to get courage, wisdom, and above all, inspiration. Few of them want lectures or entertainment. There is better entertainment to be had outside the church—but the church can be made to give something that no entertainment can furnish.

LAW COVERS EVERYTHING

A comet 12 times as large as the earth has been rushing toward us at the rate of a million miles a day. If it struck the earth, imagine what its meteoric fragments and its deadly gases would do! But it has begun to veer away. Soon it will be out of sight. It's a universe of order. Even comets stick to their paths. Law is supreme.

THRILLS ARE GOING OUT

A flight from New York to Rome is announced for October. We can never quite revive the Lindbergh thrill. There is something sad about a world that is growing so nearly thrill-proof. Perhaps we can count on enough ingenuity to furnish at least one thrill a year.

It isn't ingenuity that is running out. It seems to be our capacity for being hard-boiled that's growing.

MAKE IT A GOOD NAME

Every little while somebody hops up in court and asks to have his name changed. He doesn't like the sound of it or somebody laughs at it or something else is the matter with it. There are few if any good reasons for changing one's name. Better take the name you have and make a good name out of it. Make it stand for something big—as it is. That's a triumph.

THEY'LL FIND A WAY

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., is right when he says college fees ought to be increased and more students ought to pay their way. In the old days few went to college, and the larger number of those who did were preparing to preach or teach, and never could expect to earn much.

An increasing number of so-called students now go to college for a good time—for social reasons. Thousands of that sort are little benefited by college years. They should pay their way. And if the fees were increased the worth-while ones would find a way to pay.

SONGS of a HOUSEWIFE

OF BY Marjorie K. Rawlins

I KNOW the sort of folks—the way they live and dress and dine, the way they work and laugh and play, on shabby streets like mine.

I know why houses lack for paint, and living rooms are bare, why colors and designs grow faint in carpets on the stair.

I know how many feet are shod, the small mouths to be fed; the weary ways that must be trod for daily board and bed.

I know how much of self they give; how beautiful, how fine, the rich lives, brimming-full, folks live on shabby streets like mine.

KELLYGRAMS

WORK HARDEST WHERE EASIEST

I was in the office of the sales manager for a successful automobile concern recently when he was in the midst of re-organizing his next campaign.

"We're going to put more salesmen where business has been good and take them away from those places where it hasn't been so good," he told me.

That sounded contrary to certain maxims recalled from my school copybooks and from lives of great men. Haven't we always been told that one should invariably tackle the hard job rather than the easy one?

"It does sound more righteous to work hardest where the results have been poorest," I admitted.

"The only trouble is that such a plan doesn't always work. In certain sections of the country we haven't been selling many cars because business, crop, or weather conditions are unfavorable. No matter how hard we might work there, results would still be unsatisfactory. On the other hand, we found that in many sections, our cars have been selling without much effort—simply because people there are exceptionally prosperous. Common sense directs us, therefore, to work hardest in those places where the outlook is most promising."

Come to think of it, that is the same plan that the more intelligent political managers follow. They don't send all their most plausible speakers into territory hopelessly in the hands of the opposition, but into doubtful states or in states where they have better than an even chance for victory.

Maybe the Puritanical notion that we should work hardest or longest at the hardest job isn't always wise.

Don't devote your life trying to promote a livery stable in Venice. Sell your wares or your talents where they should be most in demand.

Go where the going is good.

Answers to Correspondents

IF YOU LIKE HARD, CRUNCHY BREADS

Bread of some kind is a universal food and is universally liked for it has no decided flavor of its own so can be taken with other foods without modifying their flavor. It is well liked also for it is "filling" and gives a comfortable sense of satiety.

Being mostly starch, bread is largely a heat and energy (power) food. Taken in excess, it will cause an acid stomach and general acidosis and overweight. In moderation it is one of our best energy foods. I am often asked about the different kinds of breads—especially asked if one type is less fattening than another type. And I'll answer that now: All breads and all other foods are "fattening" in proportion to the number of calories they contain.

DRIED BREADS

Ordinary breads contain over one-third of their weight in water (which doesn't count in calories), and they run 75 C. to the ounce; so the thoroughly dried breads, such as the Swedish Bread, or Rye Crisps, will average more than 75 C. to the ounce, for there is practically no water in them. They average probably 100 C. to the ounce. (One of the whole-grain breads I weighed registered four ounces, thus making it approximately 400 C. However, most digestive tracts will eliminate most of the bran in these—so perhaps they won't register any more than the ordinary bread.) These breads are very wholesome, because if they are thoroughly masticated for they are usually made of whole rye grains, including the bran, so are good for constipation, and they certainly are good for the teeth.

TOASTED BREADS

Toasted breads have the same caloric value as they have before toasting. The toasting, while it dehydrates (the first step in starch digestion) and so makes the starch more easily digested, doesn't impair its caloric value in the least; therefore it, too, is just as fattening as the plain breads. You won't ever say again, "I don't eat bread—only toast!" will you?

GLUTEN BREADS

Gluten bread has a higher percentage of the protein of the wheat. Protein can also be made into fat, and it will be made into fat, if it is more than the body needs for repair. Gluten bread might be advisable if no fresh foods are eaten, because of this higher percentage of protein, and it is often advised to diabetics because of the fact that it has a lessened content of carbohydrates.

WHOLE GRAIN BREAD

I recently had a little clipping sent me which stated that the whole grain bread had should be discouraged; that it is not necessary for health to have the whole grains. What do I think?

I think, and so do the majority of those who have studied the question, that whole grain breads ARE superior to the refined flour breads because in the refining of flour the germ and the outer layers are taken away, and this takes away the best part of the protein and the most of the vitamins and probably half of the mineral salts. If only white bread is used, then much more of the foods containing the mineral elements and vitamins would have to be taken, and this may mean too high a diet.

White bread, especially white bread made with milk, however, is perfectly safe to eat; there's nothing poisonous about it, as some of the faddists teach. But if it is taken exclusively, it should be limited for the reason I have given above. It is certainly safer for children, especially, to have the whole grain breads for the daily diet.

However, the fact that more of the better-grade protein and more of the vitamins and mineral elements are included in the whole grains, does not mean that it is a perfect food by itself. No grain protein is complete; that is, it does not contain all the building elements; nor would there be a sufficient amount of the vitamins and mineral elements in any grain for a complete diet. In fact, there is no one food-stuff that is complete. Milk comes the nearest.

How to Achieve Beauty

MME. HELENA RUBENSTEIN

GENERAL RULES FOR NORMAL AND DRY HAIR

To keep normal hair normal, especially if it is bobbed, I advocate washing it every week or ten days with an herbal shampoo. If there is any tendency toward dryness after the shampoo this may be overcome by rubbing in a good scalp food. At least twice a week when brushing the hair apply a little tonic to the roots. This will refresh and invigorate the scalp and the hair.

If you possess hair and scalp that are unusually dry, this may be the result of a nervous condition of the system or of careless shampooing which have produced a sluggishness of the oil glands of the scalp. This dry condition of the scalp causes the hair to become "tight" and the hair brittle and straw-like, breaking and splitting easily.

This extremely dry condition gives a parched badly-groomed appearance to the hair. To overcome it wash the hair every two days or two weeks with an herbal shampoo that has been especially compounded for a dry condition. Frequently precede the regular shampoo with a hot balsam oil treatment. This will feed the scalp and make up for the deficiency in oil which it lacks naturally.

After the herbal shampoo, rub the scalp food in well. It should not make the hair oily or hinder curling in any way.

An application of hair tonic at least three times a week is of importance if your scalp is dry. Apply the tonic before brushing so that the natural oils brought out by the brushing and the tonic itself may be carried through the hair follicles.

And now we come to the home treatment for the oily hair. This most distressing and prevalent condition of the scalp and hair is caused by relaxed glands which allow an excessive excretion of oil.

If you suffer from an extremely oily condition, wash the hair at least once a week, and if necessary more often. Every two weeks, or whenever the hair looks dull and lifeless, use an application of hot balsam oil preceding your regular shampoo. Frequently brush the hair for an oily condition. At first you may notice an increase in the oily condition, but eventually it will help materially in correcting it.

"I have observed that the possession of large sums of money by an inexperienced young man is likely to bring ruin," Edward Hillman, Chicago department store founder.

"The college graduate as a rule, is not content to take up the routine, manual work of the railroad business and they seldom will consider employment in a department where they actually can learn the business. Usually they want to work in the legal, engineering or the higher mechanical departments. On the other hand, the man who starts in the yards and works up in the transportation department is the man who eventually becomes the executive while the college man remains a specialist in his particular department."—Carl R. Gray, president, Union Pacific Railroad.

Little Old New York

NEW YORK, July 14.—In 1897 a malefactor was being tried in the state of Massachusetts on a charge of murder. His last name was Ivory. The prosecution rested its case after a terrific summing up of the evidence. The case that day was not given to the jury.

William Seaver Woods was writing heads on the Springfield Republican. He wrote a head over case after a terrific summing up of the evidence. The case that day was not given to the jury.

Woods came to New York. He is now the editor of the Literary Digest.

Rollin Lynde Harit, who used to be a preacher and who is now a magazine writer, has just read "Elmer Gantry" by Sinclair Lewis. I asked him what he thought of it. "Part of it is very true," said Harit. "As a work of realism it has a very accurate description of a stove."

The Fortieth street store of the Woolworth ten-cent emporiums is also on Fifth avenue and it is unique among the nickel and dime stores in the class of customers it attracts. Handsome men, garbed in what the popular notion is of what the well-dressed man should wear, may be seen there buying ash trays, decorative candles, novel toys, or bits of household wear and work tools. Grand dames, with immense bosoms covered with ropes of pearls may be seen loading up the arms of uniformed chauffeurs accompanying them with material for curtains, cheap silverware, glassware, and what not.

Dogs are always prominent on Fifth avenue and in Central Park, and it seems to be highly fashionable for young women to walk along the avenue with chows, Pekingeses, bulldogs, terriers, and police dogs on leashes. Yesterday I observed a lass of the sort who has tea almost every afternoon at the Ambassador, the Ritz or the Plaza, following no less than three dogs on leashes. And I must say she managed them very well in the crowd.

At an Eighth avenue tea room the other night a ribald and amusing inebriate took shelter under the awnings of the terrace in the rear of the tea shop. A heavy rain was falling. The drunk engaged some of the patrons in conversation. The proprietress, a lady of great firmness of character, the inebriate and made him begone. He was, she feared, annoying her paid guests. The drunk surveyed the bizarre Greenwich Village restaurant with its brisk Japanese waiters trotting silently to and from the kitchen, and shouted loudly, "I'm going, but I wish you success with your Chinese restaurant."

He reeled across Macdougall alley, with his pink fronted geranium adorned houses, and added, as a parting shot, in falsetto: "What time d'you serve tea?" The patrons were amused, but not the proprietress.

A cop on duty in Washington Square late the other night was startled by an apparition. He thought for a moment he was seeing ghosts. On closer scrutiny, the fantastic looking object turned out to be a man clad in an old-fashioned type of night shirt, a less-than-turning hand springs on the grass.

The cop was about to go after the tumbler and drag him to a patrol box and call the wagon when he saw the night clerk in one of the section's oldest hostilities running toward the white clad figure, brandishing a regular Will Rogers larlat. The clerk threw the larlat with great expertness and caught the acrobatic one. Then he explained rather wearily to the cop that one of his duties was that of seeing that this eccentric patron was kept safe and sound at night. "He is all right in the daytime," he explained to the cop, "but at night he goes completely off his nut, if I am not there every minute to watch him. At night he thinks he is a circus performer and will get up out of his bed to turn hand springs. He must have slipped down the fire escape. I put him to bed more than an hour ago."

Where the night clerk learned to throw a larlat, he did not explain to the cop; but he was clever at it.

A friend who has just returned from Detroit tells me that he kept hearing and overhearing the phrase, "He is going to open up next week." He could not imagine what "he" was meant, until it dawned upon him that the "he" was Henry Ford. "There is no other town in the world," he reflected, "where there is only one 'he' or at least where 'he' means one man, and one man only."

Rheumatism

Amazing relief. Agonizing pains vanish and your heart fills with gratitude for this product of German and American science. The name is Su-thol (soothe-all) tablets. It is all right in the world, it is the body of poisonous acids that cause pain and distress.

A few doses' use of Su-thol will bring results amazingly beneficial. The cost is trivial and help quick and sure. Six tube tubes in each $1.00 package.

Sciatic-Neuritis

The sciatic nerve, situated at the back of the hip joint is frequently the subject of Neuritis, giving rise to the painful disease Sciatica. The symptoms are intense pains which shoot down the thigh to the foot, often aggravated by walking, and with painful points along the course of the nerve, very tender to the touch.

The trouble is a very obstinate one and does not readily respond to ordinary treatment. It takes more than the usual pain sedative even to alleviate the pain. The best way to get relief from the persistent nerve racking pains of Neuritis is to get a bottle of Allenhu Special Formula No. 2, which comes in capsule form. Take them as directed and in about twenty-four hours you should be able to notice that they have considerably reduced, if not almost banished, all pain and soreness. Continue faithfully and in a reasonable time you should be able to work and rest in comfort once again. Sayre's Drug Store keeps Allenhu Special Formula No. 2 in stock all the time and sells lots of it.

Regain Health this Way

There is a right way to regain health—if you are anemic, weak, nervous and run-down, because of thin, watery blood and deficient gland activity.

The way is easy, pleasant, prompt. It is scientific, for it deals with supplying the elements needed by the system. The method has been used successfully 15 years. The use of Cadomene Tablets has grown to over one million a week, by users telling others how effective the method is. There are people in your own circle who have regained lost health. Your doctor or druggist can tell you of "miraculous" recoveries of thin, anemic, weak, nervous-run-down folks.

Take from your food all calcium, phosphorus, iron and magnesium—and you wither and die. Reduce the amount your blood and glands should have, and you soon become afflicted with Nerve Trouble, Gland Trouble, Anemia, Weakness, Digestive Disorders, Infected Teeth, Headaches, Lowered Vitality, Fatigue, a tendency to have "cold" frequently and a general lethargy of mind and body.

The "Balance" or level of your system is upset, due to modern methods of preparing foods from which vital elements have been taken. Cadomene gives back this lost balance promptly. Six to eight weeks' use is time enough to produce a delightful buoyancy of spirit and reserve strength. Simply take three to six tablets daily as per directions.

Cadomene Tablets is not a cheap "catch penny tonic," but an efficient source of the blood and a potent strength-inducing agent. Go, try it now. Learn that you can be well and strong. Druggists everywhere sell Cadomene on a guarantee of delightful satisfaction or money back.

LAST PLACE LEAGUE TEAM TAKES WALLOP AT LEAGUE LEADERS

Championship aspirations of the Fire Department's soft ball nine were jolted from an unexpected quarter Wednesday night when the leaders in the Class B division of the Xenia Playground League were defeated 12 to 9 by the tail-end Post Office team in a well-played game.

Up to and including this contest, the Firemen had won three straight league encounters without a defeat. The victory also served to break the three-game losing streak of the mail carriers and give them their first league victory.

Firemen continue to lead the Class B division but are now perched in first place with an advantage of only half a game.

A three-run rally in the first half of the ninth inning, which broke a 9 to 3 deadlock, gave Uncle Sam's postal employees a well-earned victory.

During the early innings the lead changed hands several times. The Post Office uncovered a good pitcher in Spriggs who held the slugging Firemen scoreless in six of the nine innings. He received much better support in the field than has heretofore been accorded hurlers for the team. L. Cope performed on the knoll for the losers and was batted rather hard.

Thursday night the league-leading Junior Business Men will meet the second-place Senior Business Men.

Lineup of Firemen: Baumbaster, c; L. Cope, p; Briley, 1b; J. Haller, 2b; Swartz, 3b; Buffington, ss; H. Fisher, lf; H. Haller, rf; Dickey, cf.

MINISTERS TO HAVE CONTROL OF SUNDAY CHAUTAUQUA PLANS

The Sunday evening program at the Chautauqua will be in charge of the Ministerial Association of Xenia and local people will take part.

The services will begin at 7:30 p. m., with Dr. W. N. Shank, First M. E. Church, in charge of the devotional period. A musical program of special numbers is in charge of the music committee: Mrs. W. H. McGervy, Mrs. W. J. Cherry and Miss Martha Anderson.

The main address of the evening will be delivered by Dr. Lewis Earle Lee, Cincinnati, executive secretary of the Hamilton County Sunday School Council of Religious Education. "Childhood's Opportunity" will be Dr. Lee's subject.

Many people in Xenia are acquainted with Dr. Lee and his success in Hamilton County and Cincinnati commends him to a Xenia audience and a large hearing is desired. Dr. W. N. Shank is in charge of the ministerial association meeting.

Dr. and Mrs. Lee will motor from Cincinnati Sunday afternoon, arriving in time for the services at 7:30 p. m.

MANY GOLFERS TAKE PART IN TOURNEY

Denied a scheduled inter-city golf match at Wilmington because the event was postponed until a later date, members of the Xenia Country Club took advantage of the half-holiday and the clear weather Wednesday afternoon to participate in a handicap tournament arranged by the tournament committee.

Players swarmed the course during the afternoon despite the sizzling heat and the fact a violent wind prevented good scores.

THE OLD HOME TOWN

YOUNG GIRL CAUGHT DURING BANK HOLDUP

SAGINAW, Mich., July 14.—"I attempted it to obtain money for my father, who owes $1,000," Viola Harris, 19, said here today after her lone attempt to hold up the Peoples Savings Bank, a large downtown institution.

Armed with a nicked single action revolver of ancient origin, the girl entered the crowded bank, and after loitering about the lobby for 20 minutes, presented a Flint bank check on which was written: "Pay to the order of the bearer $5,000; eight $500 bills and ten $100 bills; make it snappy." The check was turned in at the window occupied by Teller E. E. Speckhard.

When Speckhard noted the gun in the girl's hand he dropped to the floor and kicked the burglar alarm. The alarm brought an officer who made the arrest.

TENNIS COURTS IN PARK SOON READY

Good news to Xenia tennis devotees was broadcast Thursday with announcement that the courts in Shawnee Park would be finished and ready for players within a week.

Money donated by the W. C. T. U. is being used in getting the double courts in shape. The space has been graded and iron railing is being placed, with the screens for the backstops. The entire space has been widened to regulation size and the courts are designed to please any tennis player. The courts are located on Park Drive, opposite the John G. Baldner residence. Xenia tennis players have anxiously awaited the completion of the park courts and the announcement of the work being done is received with interest.

CONTRIBUTOR TELLS ABOUT "TINY" SMITH LOSING BALL GAME

The Men's Bible Class of the First Reformed Bible School has been enjoying an attendance contest between two teams captained by Fred Flynn and "Tiny" Smith. Tiny's team won the contest and as a result the losers invited the class to a picnic in Grinnell's Grove Wednesday evening.

The losers in the contest challenged the winners to a ball game. "Tiny" was again captain of one team but in the absence of Fred Flynn, Chester Hinkle captained the other. There were about eighteen players on each team and some of the men were in danger of being hit with the ball. George Stiles was struck once but wasn't hurt much. Dr. J. A. Yoder was umpire and E. Lighthizer was time-keeper. After playing about fifteen innings time was called with "Tiny's" team losing by the score of 27 to 12.

Supper for the fatigued athletes had been prepared by the chief cooks, A. Moser, Tom Long and Lester Barnes. Talk about eating—the tables were loaded with mountains of sandwiches of every kind and flavor—stacks of "hardboiled" eggs, to say nothing of apple pie and ice cream with watermelon as dessert and gallons of "ice cold" lemonade and "boiling hot" coffee. And did those men eat? Well, all those piles of good things just disappeared like snowballs on the Fourth of July. It was reported that Diver Belden ate so many sandwiches and drank so much coffee that he needed help to get away from the table.

Tom Long was scheduled to make a speech but he was "too full for utterance." Most of the men left before he began to speak—and the rest of them wished that they had!

If some of the business places are not open for business as usual Thursday, it is because their proprietors and clerks were playing ball and stuff joints and sore fingers—to say nothing of dyspepsia—will keep them from being on duty for a few days.

—E. E. Lighthizer

you, too, may be proud of a clear skin

If you are unfortunate in having skin blemishes, pimples, boils, eczema, you owe it to yourself and friends to remove the cause. Go to the blood. Take a course of S.S.S. Tame your system. Help Nature make you yourself again.
S.S.S. helps Nature build up red corpuscles. It improves the processes by which the blood is nourished.
"I suffered from impure blood—was weak, and I had lost so much weight, I didn't look natural. I had pimples and was also bothered with a breaking-out that itched terribly. I also had boils one after another. I tried different kinds of remedies, but nothing did me any good until a friend advised me to take S.S.S., which I did. This was some time ago. Now I feel well, and I am getting along fine. S.S.S. stopped the itching and it cured me of boils. I advise all weak and run-down people to give S.S.S. a trial. It clears up the skin and makes you strong and fills you with energy." Mrs. J. V. Barker, 1337 Walnut Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.
S.S.S. is made from the fresh roots of medicinal herbs and plants and is prepared in a scientific way in a modern laboratory. It is time-tried and reliable.
S.S.S. is sold at all good drug stores in two sizes. The larger size is more economical.

WORLD'S FIRST BILLIONAIRE GETS PLEASURE FROM WORKING

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHISON
I. N. S. Staff Correspondent
(Copyrighted 1927 By I. N. S.)

DETROIT, July 14.—Henry Ford, the richest man in the world, the best known and the least understood, today revealed many of his innermost thoughts and intimate beliefs to International News Service.

The world's first billionaire—could refrain from ever lifting a finger but gets the most pleasure by working.

Could stay in bed all day, yet is satisfied with six hours of sleep. Believes the greatest gift of his wealth was the increased work it enabled him to do.

Stays hungry to keep his appetite on edge, yet has no favorite dish.

Could live a life of luxurious ease but prefers to work from ten to sixteen hours a day.

Employs 200,000 men and likes to be the first down to work in the morning.

Owens thousands of motor cars yet likes walking as a recreation. The possession of the greatest single fortune probably in all human history, the royal throne of motordom and the leadership of a half dozen other industrial lines give Ford no special satisfaction.

"How does it feel to be the richest man in the world?" he was asked.

"I only feel I have a job," Ford replied, with serious mien.

"What was the greatest gift your wealth brought to you?"

"Just a bigger job to work at," the richest man said.

"What have you lost by being the richest man in the world?"

"Not a thing," Ford reiterated. "I get around all right."

"What do you enjoy most in life?"

"Having something to do, something to work at," the richest man answered without hesitation. "I like aviation now."

Then he smiled and added: "I like to be as up to date as I can."

It is aviation that gives Ford the "greatest thrill" he gets out of life. The huge multi-motored, many passengered air cruisers, with which he some day soon hopes to establish trans-Atlantic air lines, has displaced the fliers as his first love.

"The greatest thrill" he responded to the question. "Why I get more thrills out of watching and helping to develop our large planes than anything else I do nowadays."

"Helping to develop" means experimenting upon engines, plane bodies and other aeronautical problems.

The auto king, who will celebrate his sixty-fourth birthday on July thirtieth, has the bodily vigor and health of a man half his age. His secret of health is to keep at work. He frequently takes long walks across the countryside near his Dearborn estate and with the exception of a few old-fashioned dances at his huge Dearborn office building, walking is his chief recreation.

"How do you account for your excellent health?" he was asked.

"I keep busy all the time," Ford replied. "That's all. I never eat too much and I keep my mind occupied."

"How would you advise other men of your age to live in order to share your good health?"

"I can't," he answered. "No two men are alike. Just try to keep up to date. Everyone can do that."

"How much sleep do you get?"

"Six hours or a little less," Ford replied. "Sometimes, it may be a little longer but it is six or less. I get up early in the morning because I like to."

The richest man has no favorite dishes nor favorite menus. He eats anything that would appeal to the normal appetite.

"What is your favorite dish?" he was asked, just after he ate a lunch that included roast lamb, boiled potatoes, spinach, carrots, blueberry pie and coffee.

"I have none," he retorted, and added, with a smile, "The nearest food is best if you're hungry. I work hard enough to keep hungry and that always gives me a good appetite."

"The man who rose from poverty to multi-millions in three decades, has very definite ideas about how young Americans can succeed in life or business.

"Do you advise young men to marry young?" he was asked.

"I certainly do," Ford responded. "And they should get families. It gives them more experience and stability, aside from domestic happiness."

"Do you believe the young man on the farm should go to the city to seek his future?"

"There is no need for young men to leave the farms and villages," Ford replied. "Today, work and opportunity are being taken to the small towns and villages. The modern idea is to take work to the men; not the men to the work as it used to be. I feel village life in America is worth preserving and that has been the plan of the Ford Company—to take the work to the people. That is why we have water power plants in many little villages around here."

"Should the city youth go into business for himself or can he get ahead best by going into some corporation?"

"He should go into the big corporation because the opportunities there are greater," Ford declared. "There is more spread for his powers. He doesn't have to go through years of experiments as in attempting to run a business by himself. The corporation has tried out all the experiments and has his job all ready for him. And there is always room at the top for bright young men."

And to the young business man, the world's greatest business man offered this parting shot of advice: "If a young man is in business and is wise, he will pay less attention to those who flatter his self-esteem and more to those who stir his energies."

There was one more question. It was "how soon do you plan to retire from business?" but Ford did not answer. As he walked away with an agility that belied his years, one of his intimate friends replied:

"Never. Mr. Ford will always work."

QUAT-Z ARTS BALL LIVELY AND NUDE; SPENDERS SEE PARIS

By BASIL WOON
Author of "The Paris You Don't See in The Guidebooks," Etc.

Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927
PARIS, July 14.—Now that the headaches and the hangovers have died it is possible to write a coherent account of the world's most famous annual orgy, the Quat-z-Arts Ball.

BASIL WOON—Not to be found on cigar wrappers.

It is hard to describe that spirit. I think we may best call it being naughty without a consciousness of sin—a delightful faculty for which the Gauls, of course, are famous. The answer to the Quat-z-Arts critics is that a man who is deprived but once a year is not really deprived at all. The Quat-z-Arts is nothing more than a modern attempt to revive for one night—the times of Nero and Nebuchadnezzar and Balthazar. It is a highly successful attempt because the more matter of sex has not greatly changed during the intervening years. We have lost a little by its suppression, that is all. Neither is the human body much changed since the days of Sodom and Gomorrah. The effect of fermented grape-juice on the brain is also much as it was when Khayyam lived and soliloquized.

Orthodox Nudity

People who go to the Foilles-Borgere to be shocked and find they can sit through four acts of nudity without a thrill know that whereas one unclothed man or woman may be a sensation, three are already ordinary and any number above ten almost orthodox.

At 4 a. m. in the Salle Wagram I counted, as well as my wits would allow me, upwards of two thousand revellers. Of these possibly four hundred wore no clothes at all.

The effect was actually no more shocking than physical inspection at a recruit camp. But it was much more amusing. And say.

Just Hats and Paint

Earlier in the evening the costumes were absolutely gorgeous. The period was Cambodian, or Cochinchinese.

Principal features of Cambodian costumes are the weird pagoda hats, occasionally twice as tall as the wearer, and the cabalistic and often disconcerting designs tattooed on the painted bodies.

Thus it was that a large number of artists came to the hall attired in little else than hats and paint, which also is strictly in accordance with the traditions of the Quat-z-Arts.

Whereas last year the paint was red and the year before yellow-ochre, this year the paint was citrine or silver. Most of the men were painted from head to foot, and fellow-artists had spent hours designing the mystical symbols of the Saigons on their bare bodies.

Demand for Arrest

Ten thousand people, held back by treble cordons of smiling police, gathered to watch the artists enter the hall, exclaiming at the costumes and gasping as some unusually daring warrior passed by with his attel.

Only one person in this vast crowd gave vent to any feelings but delight. She might have stepped from a page of Sinclair Lewis.

"They ought to be arrested!" she said.

An Unlucky Canadian

This year's ball was more than usually closed to "outsiders." In 1926 tourists who paid two and three thousand francs for tickets spoiled the effect by their absolute inability to enter into the spirit of the thing.

There is a rule against spectators at the Quat-z-Arts Ball. All must join in and make merry. Thus this year those hardy tourists who did succeed in getting hold of tickets were quickly spotted at the entrance, liberally doused with yellow paint from a huge bucket held in readiness, and cast back in the street.

If they had female companions, however, these were immediately ushered in—providing that their costumes were appropriately indecent.

One incautious Canadian took his wife. He was ejected but his wife was passed in, and all that night the poor devil sat shivering on the terrace of a cafe opposite, hoping against hope that his luckier half would soon come out. But it was 5 a. m. before she appeared and what he said to her is unknown.

Not Vicious

There was nothing vicious or horrid about this year's ball. A woman was quite as safe there, if she joined in the merriment, as in her own home. But one man, an Italian, who stood scornfully on the sidelines and was heard to comment audibly that the whole thing was "disgraceful," was seized by a joyous throng of students, stripped, and then forced to drink to the health of the King of Cochinchina standing on a table!

Queen Quality

And after that we had the beauty contest, when sixty young ladies of varying pulchritude were in turn hoisted aloft so that the throng could the better judge their qualifications.

Qualifications for beauty at the Quat-z-Arts, it should be remarked, pay little attention to the face. The jury of artists examines much more attentively the limbs, feet, bust and lines of the neck. Each year's Queen of the Quat-z-Arts is a champion model for the "altogether."

Beautiful Sportswoman

I broke off there to take Fleur-de-lis (that's my wife) out to Chantilly to see one of the most beautiful women in the world win the French Derby with Mon Talisman, hailed as the greatest bit of horse-flesh Europe has produced since Epinard. He won by five lengths with Semblat, crack jockey of France, actually turning around in the saddle to watch the race!

The lovely owner is Senora Martinez de Hoz, wife of the richest man in the Argentine Republic. Senora de Hoz is far more of the new aristocracy of wealth than is Henry Ford, for his wealth came from cattle and the land. It is said that he owns half of Buenos Aires.

Usually the most lavish spenders are the semi-millionaires, those who have not quite got used to the feeling of wealth. But E. Martinez de Hoz, like the Maharajah of Kapurthala, is an exception. His mode of living is more than princely, it is regal.

He is said to own ten country houses in France, England and the Argentine; two strings of race-horses, twenty-nine automobiles and three yachts.

Speaking of Spenders

Talking about spenders, a

wealthy oil man and his lawyer out in California were reading a book written by a friend of mine about a tour he made in Europe. "If we could get that man to guide us around exactly the same route we'd have a helluva time," said the millionaire.

Forthwith he called to the publishers who answered that my friend was in Europe. Taking this as a sign from the gods the Californians came to New York and booked passage on a fast liner. They had four days to stay in New York and, disliking taxis, the oil man strode into the Park and a salesrooms one morning, indicating a bright-green limousine in the window, inquired of a clerk:

"Can it run?" The clerk was insulted. "Can it run?" he snorted. "That's a special job and the motor's the finest we make."

"Got anybody here who can run it?" "Why—yes, I guess we can—" "Get it out there on the road. I'll buy it. And say—" as the clerk hastened away for the smelling salts, "get one for my friend here, too."

Just Pin-Money

They came to Europe, met my friend, made their tour and to judge by all accounts their progress across Europe has been paved with thousand-dollar bills. In recognition of the good times they had they presented my friend, the author, with stock in an oil company worth several thousand dollars.

ATTORNEY GENERAL DEFINES LAWS FOR DEPOSITING MONEY

COLUMBUS, O., July 14.—A board of education in a school district containing less than two banks is empowered to enter into a contract for the deposit of its funds with two, or more, banks located either within or outside Ohio, according to an opinion given by Attorney General Edward

C. Turner to officials of the state bureau of inspection and supervision of public offices.

"Such bank must have been determined by said board of education to be conveniently located and must, upon competitive bidding, offer the highest rate of interest of any of the banks entering into such competition," Turner has ruled. "Such interest shall not, in any case, be less than two per cent for the full time the funds, or any part thereof, are on deposit, and such bank must furnish proper security as provided by law."

"A board of education in a school district containing two, or more, banks has no authority to select as its depository bank a bank located outside the state of Ohio until, after advertising for bids for the carrying of depository accounts, the board shall determine that there has been collusion between the bidders, in which event it may reject any, and all bids and arrange for the deposit of its funds in a bank, or banks, that are conveniently located without the district, either within or without the state," Turner held.

"Such bank so selected must conform to the provisions of law with reference to the payment of interest and the furnishing of proper security," declared the attorney general.

Must Have Music

DR. HARVEY W. WILEY, FAMOUS PURE FOOD EXPERT, WHO INSISTS THAT NO LIFE IS COMPLETE WITHOUT MUSIC

By JOHN LEO COONTZ
Exclusive Dispatch, Copyright 1927
WASHINGTON, D. C., July 14.—Pure music is an essential to a well-rounded life as food says Dr. Harvey Wiley, America's famous food expert.

Dr. Wiley, who is father of the Pure Food and Drug Act of 1906, gave expression to this view in a recent letter to Edouard Albion, director of the Washington Opera Company. The occasion was the application of Dr. Wiley for a commission of operatic concerts to be held at the national capital.

Discussing music in general Dr. Wiley declared that "the mental stimulus and enjoyment derived by me from good music has done me as much good in the course of my life as has, perhaps, any other one thing."

"When I was a student in Europe I often attended performances of grand opera and concerts and I sought the gallery. In fact I went as high up as I could get for two reasons. One was that I didn't have very much money, what with the cost of my studies and ordinary living expenses and the higher I went the cheaper the seats were. But the other was that up there I was among the real music lovers. The people knew music. They knew their operas backward and forward and they were frankly insistent on their standards."

Sang to Galleries

"And you can believe that the artists sang to the galleries as well as to those persons of more means who were seated on the floor of the theater. Those downstairs might applaud politely even if not pleased. But not the galleries. There the hisses were as potentially sibilant as the bravos and vivas of approval were loud."

"The people of those countries knew their operas and other good music because they had had opportunities to hear them constantly from the time they were born. Music was a part of their daily lives."

Dr. Wiley's two sons, Harvey W. Wiley, Jr., and John Preston Wiley, fifteen and thirteen years of age, respectively, are studying the piano, and Dr. Wiley readily admits that they "are beginning to show some understanding of music and to play well."

The veteran food dictator, himself in his 83rd year, never misses a performance of an opera in the city. His huge form—he is over six feet in height—topped by an iron grey head, may be picked out immediately in any performance. He is always accompanied by his wife. "Attending the opera," he says, "is more than amusement."

The Rovin' Ritzies

By Flo Frederick

When Ritzie plans come to nill they always fall back on good old Bill.

Bill had scarcely set one foot inside the Collins' back yard before he was brought to a standstill by a commanding "Sh-h-h-h!"

Quite startled upon receiving such an unusual greeting, he stood perfectly still and looked about him. There was no one in sight. That is, no one that he could see. In the center of the yard a wooden box, propped up on one side with a stick, was the only unusual thing to be seen.

"What's up now?" thought the perplexed Bill to himself. "Are they hiding from me or somebody else?"

Deciding that it was a game of hide-and-go-seek, he started to make a dash around the yard and rustle out the hiders, but had scarcely made a move before he was brought to a standstill again by that cautioning "Sh-h-h-h!"

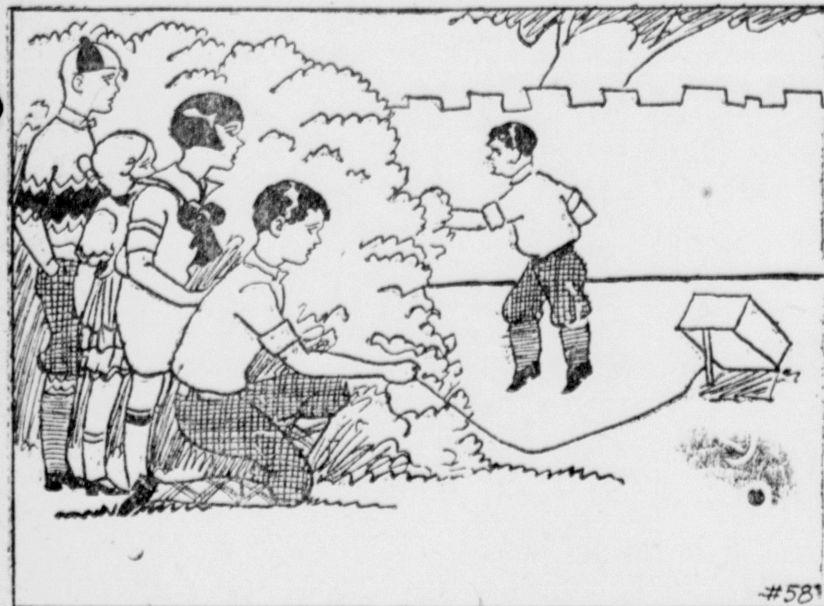

Noticing that the muffled sound came from over among the bushes, he looked close, and sure enough, there was someone hiding there, for he had seen the least bit of a movement. It was then that his

from laughing. They had placed an old grocery box upside down on the lawn, propped it up on one side with a stick, and had put tempting bread crusts and grain underneath. Marty was holding the string that was tied to the stick and probably intended to give it a pull when a bird should peck at the bread crust, thus pulling the box to the ground and making the bird a prisoner.

He was about to tell Marty that the idea was all wrong when another "Sh-h-h-h!" from Patsy cautioned him to be silent, and looking towards the box he was greatly surprised to see a Baltimore Oriole hopping towards the tempting bread crust. He was sure that it was a Baltimore Oriole, because of its orange body and black wings.

"Oh, if we could only catch it," thought each of the breathless Ritzies. "If it would only go under the box!"

And then, before anyone could think, it had gone under the box and Marty had pulled the string. The box had fallen to the ground in less than a second; but had there been a flutter of wings?

eye caught something that he had not noticed before. A string led from the stick that was holding up the box in the center of the yard to the very spot among the bushes where someone was hiding.

Although the string did not help to enlighten him as to what the kids were up to, he knew at least what they were waiting for. So that they were waiting for something to happen that they didn't he carefully tiptoed around the side of the yard and there came upon the whole Ritzie gang hidden among the bushes.

"What's the idea?" he asked in a whisper.

"We're trying to catch a bird," whispered Marty, who was holding the string that was tied to the box in the center of the yard.

At last it was all clear to Bill. He could see what they were planning to do and could hardly keep

Could the bird have gotten away, right from under their very eyes?

Cautiously they approached the box and peeked underneath. The bird was gone. Consternation filled the little group. They were sure that everything had gone as expected, and that Marty had pulled the string at the right moment. What could have happened?

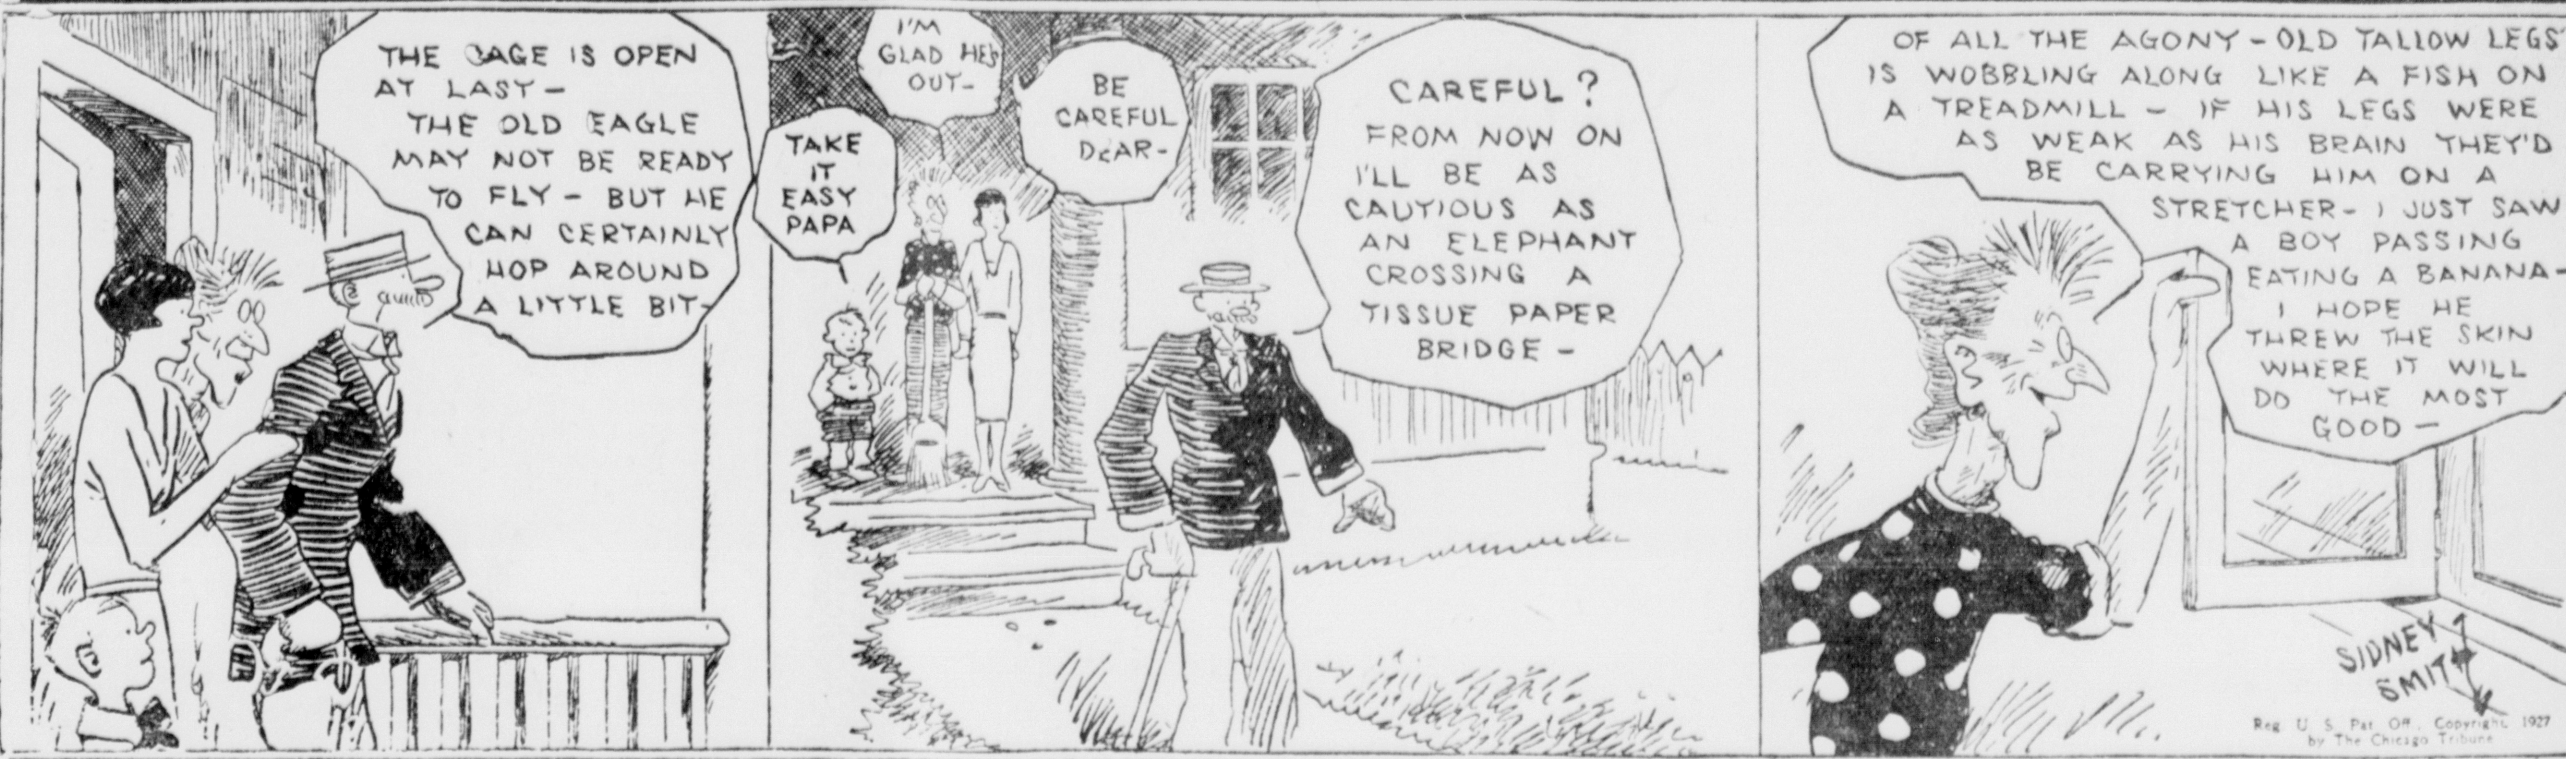

"Don't feel so bad about it," said Bill cheerfully. "You can't expect to catch a bird without a figure-four trap. They're too quick."

"But it was that beautiful orange bird," exclaimed Betty Ann, almost in tears.

"There are lots more orioles around, and anyway, this one may come back," said Bill. "I'll show you how to catch birds, or squirrels, or you how I learned to make a figure-four trap in camp one year. We even rabbit with it."

CHAPTER X

SALLY saw that the only thing was to stay there and listen to what Ted Sloan had to say to her. She had known it for a long time.

For months she had seen that this moment was bound to come sooner or later. This moment when Ted would set their friendship aside and insist upon making love to her. "Making a perfect fool of himself" was the way Sally put it to herself.

Now that the moment was actually upon her, she was nervous and uncertain.

"Well, what do you want?" she asked him sharply. "Tell me what's on your mind, only make it snappy. And you might take your hands off my shoulders, too, if you don't mind. Because I do."

"You do what?" asked Ted, whose brain did not begin to work as fast as hers.

"I mind having your hands on my shoulders," she said firmly. "I was shocked when you put them there with a sudden twist of her whole body."

She leaned back against the railing and looked up at him, waiting for him to begin. After a minute or two he did.

"You make it mighty hard for me, Sally," he said dolefully. "I was going to ask you to marry me, and you tell me you hate to have my hands on your shoulders." His voice sounded hurt, and she was sorry for him all at once.

"After all, he was a nice boy, even if she didn't want to marry him. She didn't want to marry anyone. She started to say so, and changed her mind."

"I never have liked to have anybody touch me," she said steadily. "It's not because I don't like you, Teddy, because I do. Don't like you, Teddy, because I do. Don't like you, Teddy, because I do."

"For he had put his arms around her and was turning her towards him with the strong pressure of his hands on her waist."

"Don't do that!" she cried out again, and tried to push him away from her. She put her hands up against his face as it came down close to her own. It seemed like the face of a stranger—an enemy—in the starry darkness. And he was going to kiss her! This stranger.

"Don't—please—" said Sally, and something of her confused agony must have been in her voice, for the man suddenly let her go. She sank back against the porch railing, with her hand up to her mouth as if she actually had kissed it.

"I'm sorry," Ted apologized after a second. "I didn't know you felt this way about me. . . . I thought you liked me all this time while we've been dancing together, going to shows."

"Oh, but I do!" Sally told him solemnly. "I like you, Ted. Ted Sloan. And I'd rather dance with you than do anything I can think of. But I hate this!"

She spread out her arms as if to show him that what she meant by "this" was the warm darkness, the solitude, the romance of the summer night.

wasn't making much money, but I knew I'd be making more pretty soon. And I thought you could keep on working for a while after we were married—and look after the house nights and mornings, like you do now for your mother. It wouldn't be so hard."

No, it wouldn't be so hard, said Sally to herself, her eyes on the dark roofs of the houses on the next street. . . . But somehow the picture that Ted was painting for her with his words wasn't the way she had always pictured her married life, when love and marriage should come to her.

She had always thought of herself as a home-maker as well as a wife and a lover. She had imagined herself working all day long in a little house with a little garden somewhere. Getting together a nice little supper that wouldn't cost much but would be deliciously cooked. Rushing upstairs at the end of the day to powder her nose and tuck up her hair for the return of a husband—a husband who was certainly not Ted Sloan in her wildest dreams!

That was Sally's idea of marriage, and it had no part-time office job in it. . . . Why, getting married to Ted and working at two jobs would be almost like life as it was now. Never enough time to do anything well. Never enough money to do anything as it should be done.

"But even that wouldn't be so bad if I loved him," thought Sally. She turned and put her strong, capable little hands on his shoulders for just an instant.

"Ted, we're such very good friends—can't we stay friends and forget all this love stuff?" she asked him. "You don't really care for me. I'm sure of it. You just think you do."

He shook his head silently. He didn't know what the little negative movement meant, and while she was wondering he turned and went padding down the steps to the porch below.

"Oh, you poor palooka!" Sally called after him cheerfully. He felt more cheerful, somehow, now that he was going. "Oh, you poor palooka, why don't you let well enough alone?"

In the little bedroom with its two beds set close to each other, Millie was waiting for her.

She was sitting beside the open window, letting the warm night breeze blow in upon her half-dry hair, and she was peacefully ripping up Sally's black satin dress with an old safety razor blade.

"Christopher Columbus! What are you doing to my dress?" asked Sally, her eyes wide.

Millie lifted her head. "Can't you see, Dumb Dolly?" she asked in her slow, slippery little voice. "Rippin' up this dress you threw away."

"I threw away? Why, I never did any such thing!" declared Sally. "And you know it! I told you it wasn't any good the way it was, and I—"

"And you said you were through with it!" broke in Millie. She placidly ripped a few more inches of seam with her blade.

"I'm going to make a bathing suit out of it," she added. "It's no good for anything else. You can have what's left for your scrap bag."

"I can have what's left for my scrap bag!" Well, that's good, isn't it?" asked Sally. She was scarlet with indignation. She had been counting on wearing that dress for another two months—until it was cold enough to buy a cloth dress for the winter.

She rushed across the room and pulled the shining black stuff from her sister's hands, rolled it up and laid it at the foot of her bed. "My stars!" she cried, her eyes blazing. "If that isn't just like you—cutting up a good dress! What do you think I'm going to wear to work? Tar paper? Here! If you want to do any sewing you might get busy on these!" She had opened one of Millie's dresser drawers, and was flinging pair after pair of holey stockings at her. "Mend those, if you're so full of pep, and want some work to do!"

"Children! Children!" came Mrs. Jerome's voice from the open doorway. "Birds in their little nests agree!"

Every now and then she seemed to forget that her children were grown, and talked to them as if they still were the tiny things they had been years before.

In the hall behind her the telephone trilled, and Millie bounded out to answer it. The one and only time when Millie moved quickly was when she thought one of her "sweeties" might be calling her.

"He-e-e-llo!" she said now, in the honey-sweet drawl that made men think what a nice, good-natured little thing she was. "O-o-o-h, it's you, Mr. Davidson? O-o-o-h, I'm just fl-line—"

Sally set her lips and shook her head in honest wrath.

"Look at that!" she said to her mother in a low intense tone. "Cut up the only between-seasons dress I own to make a bathing suit out of it! Ever hear of such a thing? Now I've got to sew it all together again!"

When Millie came back to the bedroom she had evidently decided not to be on speaking terms with her sister. She pretended not to hear when Sally spoke to her. She dried her own hair, and Sally let her do it. In silence they lay down and went to sleep a few feet away from each other. Sisters.

The next night Beau came home with the new guitar that he had craved. And not only with the guitar, but with a new and remarkable sports sweater that resembled Johnny's coat of many colors.

"I can play it, too," he said. "The sweater?" asked Sally, wickedly.

"No, the guitar, you simp," answered Beau, who had very little sense of humor.

He could play it, too. That is, he could play one tune on it, and that was an old one, called "Miami Shore."

It was a lovely, lilting sort of tune, however, and the sound of it brought Sally from the kitchen, where she was hurrying with the supper.

"Play it in double time, and I'll show you a new dance that Ted and I made up," she said, her night-blue eyes dancing. "Play it in double time—"

And, as he did, she started to dance.

To see Sally dance was a joy. For she loved to dance, and anyone who looked at her could see that she loved it. She frolicked like a happy child on a breezy day. She whirled lightly as a leaf in the wind. Dancers are born, not made, and Sally was a born dancer.

"Atta girl!" she heard a deep voice behind her say, and she stopped dead in the middle of the living room floor. Against the shadowy background of the hall stood a man she never had seen before. A good-looking blond man in a gray suit and a necktie striped like a candy cane. The kind of man who knows everything there is to know about some things. A man about town is what we usually call such a man.

"Oh, you must be Millie's Mr. Davidson!"

Idson!" said Sally, all out of breath. And then she saw that Ted had come up the stairs—drawn by the sound of music and dancing feet, no doubt—and was standing just behind him.

"Come in, both of you," she said, and left Beau to introduce them. She rushed back to the bedroom where Millie was making herself beautiful before the mirror.

"Your Mr. Davidson's here!" she told her. "And oh, isn't he good looking!" It was the first time Millie and she had spoken in a whole day.

Millie shrugged her shoulders and looked bored. "He's not half so good looking as that John Nye man," she remarked in a matter of fact way. "And I can hardly wait until I start working for him. This Davidson is just a once-in-a-while for me."

Sally felt as if a sudden wind had chilled her to the marrow.

"Go on in there and talk to him," Millie went on peevishly. "If you don't, Ted will try to sell him a car, and Beau's just as likely as not to ask him for a loan. You know it, don't you?"

She opened a paste-board box that was lying on her bed and took a dress from it. A pale blue flannel dress that Sally never had seen before.

"Why, where did you get that?" she asked, as Millie shook it out and flipped it over her head. "I never saw it before. Is it new?"

Her sister nodded. "It's as new as it ever was," she answered dryly. "And it was pretty new once upon a time."

Sally went back to the living room with a troubling question in her mind. . . . Yesterday morning Beau and Millie had both been penniless, or almost penniless. Now each of them seemed to have plenty of money. Where had it come from?

Kills Pesky Ants, Roaches and Bed-Bugs

Just pour a little P.D.Q. wherever there are bed-bugs, roaches or ants. See how quickly they die. This marvelous chemical discovery can do no damage to your springs, or furniture, will not rot or stain clothing. P.D.Q. is used and recommended by leading hotels, hospitals and railroads as the quickest and safest way of getting rid of pesky insects. Instantly it smothers and kills the living creatures, coats their eggs, and stops them from hatching and multiplying. A 35c package of this golden chemical will kill a million bed-bugs. P.D.Q. can also be had in double-strength liquid form—ready for use. Free patent sprout enables you to reach hard-to-get-at places with ease. Get P.D.Q. at your druggist's today. Your money back if the bugs are not gone tomorrow.

DOAN'S PILLS

Stimulant Diuretic to the Kidneys

Post-Modern Co., Mfg. Chem., Buffalo, N.Y.

Keep Eliminative System Active

Good Health Requires Good Elimination.

ONE can't feel well when there is a retention of poisonous waste in the blood. This is called a toxic condition, and is apt to make one tired, dull and languid. Other symptoms are sometimes toxic backaches and headaches. That the kidneys are not functioning properly is often shown by scanty or burning passage of secretions. Many people have learned the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, when the kidneys seem functionally inactive. Everywhere one finds enthusiastic Doan's users. Ask your neighbor!
